Local, US citizen spouses of alien workers urged to support DOI's recommendations

By FERGIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

More local and U.S. citizen spouses of foreign workers should come out and voice their support to the U.S. Department of the Interior's recommendations for improved immigration status for long-term guest workers, according to Rabby Syed, one of the organizers of Sunday's motorcade and assembly.

Syed, who is president of the United Workers Movement-NMI, told Saipan Tribune yesterday that their motorcade and assembly showed that many locals and U.S. citizens support Interior's recommendations.

He said both Francisco Dela Cruz and Joe Torres were among the spouses of foreign workers who appeared at the event and voiced their support.

"My wife, a local, was there too," Syed said.

He said the spouses of foreign workers should consider the matter carefully.

Syed said the 2010 Unity

Core Group, which organized the motorcade, is very thankful to the many businesses that provided in-kind donations to the event.

He said they are asking Guam Delegate Madeleine Z. Bordallo, chair of the U.S. House Subcommittee on Insular Areas, Oceans, and Wildlife, to consider the plight of long-term alien workers.

"We don't have spokesperson at the hearing. We don't have resources to participate in the hearing," Syed said.

He said they hope that Bordallo will recognize that many people support Interior's recommendations, as shown by the numbers that participated in the motorcade and assembly.

Delta to resume daily Nagoya flights next month

Limited funding, unstable air service main challenges of NMI tourism

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Marianas Visitors Authority managing director Perry Tenorio disclosed yesterday that Delta Air Lines will reinstate its daily flights from Nagoya to Saipan next month, a bit of good news that would help boost visitor arrival numbers to the Commonwealth.

The carrier had suspended the same flight last April 5 due to low air seat demand from the destination.

The CNMI has been suffering from a significant reduction in airline seats from Japan since 2005 when Japan Airlines pulled out. Succeeding flight cuts by other signatory airlines further worsened air seat numbers from Japan.

During yesterday's presentation at the Saipan Rotary Club in Hyatt Regency Saipan, Tenorio cited limited marketing funds and unstable air seats as among the biggest challenges of the industry.

He said the CNMI only has $1 million to promote the islands in other destinations. This is a piddling amount when compared with Australia, which spends $12 million; Hawaii, which has $9 million; and Guam, $6 million.

He also pointed out the declining confidence in the CNMI within the travel industry because of the islands' unstable air service.

Tenorio emphasized the need for new market development to reduce risk exposure and market loss and to address the impact of federalization of immigration.

'2010 projections'

This fiscal year, which will end in September, MVA estimates air seats from Japan to reach 257,252. Based on an 80-percent load factor, projected visitor arrivals is 205,801—a 2-percent decline from last year's.

For the Korea market, Tenorio projects a 36-percent growth in visitor arrival, with expected air seats at 157,858 based on an 80-percent load factor.

MVA recorded a total of 375,808 arrivals in fiscal year 2009, compared to the 726,690 tourist arrivals recorded in fiscal year 1997, considered the peak year of the CNMI tourism industry.

Airline support, coupled with effective promotions, will result in better tourist arrivals, Tenorio said.

"Tourism is the sole revenue and economic driver for the CNMI. Both the public and private sectors are dependent on the well-being of our tourism industry," he added.

Economic impact

Tenorio said the CNMI generates $827 in direct impact for each Japanese tourist that comes in, on top of $2,710 in indirect benefits.

Among Korean travelers, each visitor creates $561 in direct impact for the CNMI and $1,843 in indirect impact to the island's economy.

Chinese tourists bring the CNMI $1,967 in direct impact and $3,163 in indirect benefits to the economy.

Russian tourists belong to the group that brings the biggest impact to the economy because of their long stays on island. The direct impact per Russian visitor is $4,323 while indirect impact reaches $14,143 per person.

However, this number is shrinking due to global competition, Tenorio said.

DLNR division's section reminds public of fishing, hunting rules

In conjunction with the Department of Public Safety's Law Enforcement Month, the Department of Lands & Natural Resources' Division of Fish and Wildlife Enforcement Section wants to emphasize to the community the need to obey current fishing and hunting regulations.

The DLNR Division of

Fish and Wildlife's Enforcement Section also reminds the community of the posted Marine Protected Areas in CNMI waters. The community is encouraged to visit the division to learn more about hunting and fishing regulations and to obtain hunting and fishing licenses. These licenses become effective on Jan. 1 of each year and expire on Dec. 31 of the same year.

The DLNR's Division of Fish and Wildlife's Enforcement Section continues its participation in this month's law enforcement activities as coordinated by the Department of Public Safety and other CNMI enforcement agencies, including the Division of Fish and Wildlife's Enforcement Section.

A "Law Enforcement Month" proclamation was signed by Lt. Gov. Eloy S. Inos, on Apr. 29, 2010, and concluded with a law enforcement motorcade. Other activities have been planned to celebrate Law Enforcement Month, including the recently held Blue Mass at the San Jose Church in Saipan.

Yesterday, the CNMI's law enforcement officers, including the Division of Fish and Wildlife's Enforcement Section, participated in a daylong Law Enforcement Open House at the Multi-Purpose Center in Susupe.

The division conducted an education/outreach presentation regarding fishing and hunting regulations, as well as demonstrations of equipment used to perform their duties.

Other law enforcement activities will follow in coming weeks. (PR)

FITIAL

110-229 at 3pm Tuesday in Washington, D.C., or 5am today in the CNMI.

The hearing was webcast live, and will be archived on the U.S. House Natural Resources Committee's Web site at <http://resourcescommittee.house.gov/>.

While Fitial and the CNMI Legislature want the Interior report withdrawn, thousands of nonresident workers and their supporters held a motorcade and peaceful assembly on Sunday, expressing their strong support for the Interior report and asking Congress to immediately act on the recommendations.

Five issues

The governor told Salazar that he and the CNMI Legislature have five "serious problems" with the Interior report, including the lack of "any effort to seek the views of the Commonwealth governor as required by law."

Assistant Interior Secretary for Insular Affairs Tony Babauta personally handed copies of the Interior report to CNMI officials on April 30 on Saipan, some six hours after the federal agency submitted the report to the U.S. Congress.

Babauta said there had been consultations and hearings on the issues contained in the report both in the CNMI and in Washington, D.C.

Fitial, in his seven-page letter, also asked Salazar to direct that the data on which the report was based on be shared with the CNMI, and to request one of the Interior secretary's deputies to oversee the preparation of another report in collaboration with the Commonwealth.

Fitial also asked Salazar to advise pertinent congressional committees of these actions.

"I can promise you that a joint effort by the Commonwealth and your department to address the issues that the law specifies will be more complete, thoughtful, and fair than the report that was submitted under your name to the public and the congressional committees," Fitial told Salazar in a letter dated May 10, 2010.

No immediate statement from Interior on Fitial's letter could be obtained as of yesterday afternoon.

Fitial said he and the CNMI Legislature are also concerned about the report's data collection and analysis, which they describe as "seriously defective." He said the conclusions regarding the Commonwealth's economy and future need for foreign workers are rebutted by publicly available data and professional economic analysis.

He also said the report's authors failed to consider the potential impact of their recommendations on unemployed U.S. citizens in the CNMI and the ability of the CNMI to provide essential public services to its residents.

"The OIA report recommends unique immigration treatment for foreign workers in the Commonwealth that is not justified under any rationale; and any such change in status should be considered only in the context of overall immigration reform in the United States," Fitial said.

The Interior report recommends five options to grant long-term immigration status to foreign workers who have been legally residing in the CNMI for at least five years.

These include conferring outright U.S. citizenship to aliens by an act of Congress, granting them permanent residency status leading to U.S. citizenship, or granting them a status similar to that of Freely Associated States citizens.

Rabby Syed, president of the United Workers Movement-NMI, reiterated that the worker groups respect the position taken by the CNMI governor and the Legislature, but said it is now up to the U.S. Congress to act on the Interior report and recommendation.

Subcommittee hearing

The U.S. House Subcommittee on Insular Areas, Oceans, and Wildlife hearing was specifically for the proposed visa waiver program for Russian and Chinese tourists to the CNMI, but CNMI officials said they will grab the opportunity to speak out against the Interior report.

The subcommittee, chaired by Guam Delegate Madeleine Z. Bordallo, invited seven individuals to testify at the hearing.

Panel 1 included U.S. Government Accountability Office director for international affairs and trade Dr. David B. Gootnick; Interior Assistant Secretary for Insular Affairs Tony Babauta; Guam Gov. Felix P. Camacho; and CNMI Gov. Benigno R. Fitial.

Panel 2 included CNMI Senate President Paul A. Manglona (R-Rota); CNMI Rep. Frederick P. Deleon Guerrero (Ind-Saipan); and Guam Visitors Bureau vice chairman Lamonte "Jim" J. Beighley.

The other CNMI officials who went to Washington, D.C. for the hearings were Senate Vice President Jude U. Hofschneider (R-Tinian) and House Minority Leader Diego T. Benavente (R-Saipan).

Along with Manglona and Deleon Guerrero, the lawmakers will present copies of the adopted House Joint Resolution 17-4, HSI, which opposes the Interior report and asks the U.S. Congress to direct Interior to consult with the CNMI governor.

The CNMI Women's Organization, a non-profit organization, also started an online petition "vehemently opposing" the Interior report. As of 4pm yesterday, the online petition had 566 signatures.

CHINESE

ised that they would be issued U.S. visas.

The woman was among many Chinese nationals the U.S. Department of Homeland Security wants removed from the Commonwealth.

DHS Immigration and Customs Enforcement assistant chief counsel Jeannette Park said the woman arrived on Saipan on Jan. 22, 2009, using a visitor entry permit. In October 2009, her permit was changed to a student permit.

On Jan. 5, 2010, the woman was among the 25 persons arrested for allegedly trying to sneak into Guam illegally, Park said, adding that the woman pleaded guilty in February 2010 and was sentenced to probation.

The woman told Los Angeles-based immigration judge Rose Peters that an American-Chinese tricked her into paying about 40,000 to 50,000 RMB ($5,800 to $7,300) just to come to Saipan. She also expressed belief that the federal government had a hand in the elaborate scheme that landed her in jail.

"I was treated like a mafia by the U.S. government," she said, referring to her arrest in connection with the human smuggling case. "They told us that if we are smuggled to Guam, then we will get U.S. immigration status."

She said she believes she and other Chinese students would not have been victimized to come to the island had it not been without the collaboration of the federal government.

When asked to cite an example of how federal agents committed crimes against her, the woman showed a piece of paper that, according to her, was an identification card issued by the Guam government.

"This [card] is valid for 10 years," she said. "Even the federal police cannot deny this."

When asked what the document is all about, the woman said a lawyer gave it to her. "This is the document to prove that federal agency tricked us to commit crime," she said.

The judge looked at the paper and admitted it as evidence.

Peters told the woman that she's accusing the U.S. government of committing crimes against her.

The woman said she entered the CNMI legally, but that her permit expired because federal agents detained her.

Peters advised the woman to see a lawyer or go to Immigration and ask if they could give her a permit to stay.

As the respondent could not make a definite decision, the judge stated that she finds the respondent removable as she has no valid visa to stay.

The woman, however, said she is scared to go back to China because of her conviction in the human smuggling case. The judge told her she may qualify for withholding of removal or for relief on convention against torture.

She gave the woman some documents that she needs to fill up and bring during the next hearing on Aug. 3, 2010 at 1pm.

Judge Peters has been holding immigration hearings on Saipan since Monday. The last hearing will be tomorrow, Thursday.

work, not timing in or out, and allowing other employees to time in or out for them, which Ayuyu said are violations of policies and regulations.

"I do not think the administration will entertain the petition I will call the employees in and we will have a meeting about their concerns. I have been here for four months and I have already made changes to improve the center," Ayuyu told Saipan Tribune.

The petition, addressed to Rota Mayor Melchor A. Mendiola, accused Ayuyu of misconduct and dereliction of duties.

Rota Health Center has 45 employees, including the resident director. Twenty-nine of these employees signed the petition.

Mendiola did not return calls for comment. Ayuyu said it would be up to Mendiola to decide what to do with the petition.

The petition lists five concerns about Ayuyu, including his alleged failure to enhance employee morale and motivation due to inappropriate direction and decisions, and unprofessional conduct displayed toward employees such as not treating them with respect.

Third, the petitioners said the resident director "shows no support for the divisions to perform their duties and responsibilities."

They also said Ayuyu's "main concern is to follow Rota Health Center employees around and eavesdrop on our conversation by putting his Management scholarship.

"I'm really grateful that my contributions are being recognized," said Ferrer.

Both Rodriguez and Ferrer were awarded the Phi Theta Kappa scholarship after being recognized for their active participation in the organization and for maintaining ear to the door of certain divisions. This type of behavior shows his luck of trust for his subordinates and also shows a childish behavior."

The petitioners also said that Ayuyu tape records meetings with certain employees only. "He says he is recording his meetings for his record, but if it is for his record, why only with some employees and not all?" the petitioners asked.

Ayuyu cited an incident where he asked one of the employees to re-state on a tape recorder a statement he told a high GPA.

The Student Leadership Award is given to graduating students who have demonstrated exceptional leadership and service to the college and the community. Although Rodriguez and Ferrer are presidents of student organizations, it is not a requirement for nominees to have been in a formal leadership position at NMC to be considered for the award.

NMC interim president Lorraine T. Cabrera said both students deserve the honor. "Miles and Roxanne deserve this recognition. This is a testament to their true leadership," she told Saipan Tribune.

NMC is expecting over a hundred students to graduate this Spring semester. This year's commencement exercises will be held at the Marianas High School Gymnasium on Saturday and will be keynoted by NMC longtime instructor Sam McPhetres.

"I am satisfied with their professionalism and work, that's why I want to keep them here at the Rota Health Center," Ayuyu added.

The employees who signed the petition are from different divisions or offices within the Rota Health Center, including the Bureau of Environmental Health, Vital Statistics, Nursing Division, Vital Statistics Unit, Dietary Section, Maintenance, Public Health, Medical Referral, Dental Unit, Billing, Housekeeping, and Procurement.

More nurses eyed for hospital

Govt proclaims May 23-29 as CNMI Nurses Week

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

More nurses are needed at the Commonwealth Health Center in order for the hospital to be fully staffed so the Department of Public Health is now collaborating with the Saipan Southern High School's Nursing Academy to develop the island's nursing workforce.

The hospital currently has a nursing staff of 190, said DPH Secretary Kevin Villagomez, but it is actually approved to hire more than 200 nurses.

"We have approved FTEs [full-time employees] of over 200 and we haven't filled everything yet. We need more nurses to become fully staffed...and we're still hiring," Villagomez told Saipan Tribune yesterday.

DPH reported early this year that it has a nursing workforce of 235. If the present number is at 190, this means a significant reduction in the nursing population in the last five months.

Villagomez highlighted the islands' need for more nurses during yesterday's proclamation signing at the Office of the Governor designating May 23-29 as CNMI Nurses Week. The theme of the celebration is "Caring today for a healthier tomorrow."

Acting Gov. Eloy Inos signed the proclamation and urged everyone to join the government in honoring nurses by celebrating their accomplishments and efforts to improve the local health care system.

Villagomez said the department's collaboration with Saipan Southern High School's Nursing Academy would augment the islands' nursing workforce and create an available pool of future nurses.

Saipan Tribune learned that 130 nurses now working at CHC are nonresident aliens and may soon be displaced by federal immigration issues.

Villagomez disclosed that DPH pays its nurses an average salary of $33,000 to $40,000 and a maximum salary of up to $50,000-plus. This is on top of overtime pay and benefits. He described these figures as "comparable" to most places in the Pacific region.

In previous years, nurses and doctors have been leaving the hospital due to uncompetitive salaries and benefits. The housing benefit for nonresident nurses was previously suspended but was soon reinstated after many nurses threatened to quit. Villagomez assured that the housing issue for nurses has been resolved.

'Often neglected and overlooked'

Nursing director April Ricotta, in a letter to nurses, said their profession is often described as an art and a science that embraces dedicated people with varied interests, strengths, and passions.

"We have many roles—from staff nurse to educator to nurse practitioner and nurse researcher—and serve all of them with passion for the profession and with a strong commitment to patient safety."

She said it is also an honorable and amazing profession that is often taken for granted and overlooked.

"These days the nurses in the CNMI are facing many obstacles and challenges and it is time that a tender hand is extended toward all of you. ... This is a time of change and of unknown futures which can lend itself to confusion and fear," she said. "It is during times like these that nurses must remember to look at one another and say thank you."

"This week is to celebrate each and every one of you... to tell you that we are grateful for your work and your devotion. May this year be filled with opportunities and positive change," Ricotta added.

Throughout the week, various continuing education will be conducted among nurses and the public. A Mass is also scheduled on Sunday, while a Nurses' Ball will cap the activities for the week.

Nogis submits not guilty plea in littering case

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_delatorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Felix R. Nogis appeared in federal court yesterday and pleaded not guilty to a citation issued by the National Park Services that charged him with leaving behind a large amount of trash after a recent party at the American Memorial Park in Garapan.

Joseph N. Camacho and Michael Evangelista served as counsels for Nogis.

Visiting federal court judge John C. Coughenour set the trial for Friday at 9am.

In an interview with Saipan Tribune after the hearing, Camacho said a person under a democratic system can have his day in court and state his side of the story.

"We cannot get into the details strategy yet," Camacho said.

Evangelista said the public should not rush to judgment. He pointed out that under the justice system, accused persons are presumed innocent until proven guilty.

"We've asked for a trial date and that's when we will tell our side of the story," he said.

National Park Service Ranger Brian Piercy, who issued the citation to Nogis for littering on April 26, appeared in court.

The U.S. Attorney's Office is expected to handle the case during trial.

Camacho said they will direct their request for discovery of documents such as police reports to the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Piercy stated in court papers that he was on duty at the American Memorial Park on April 26 when a park maintenance staff told him about a large amount of litter at the baseball field.

Piercy said it was determined during the follow-up investigation that the table used for the party had been reserved by Nogis.

"He was requested to come to the scene where he was advised and shown the litter left behind. He was issued this violation notice," the ranger said.

Piercy then filed a statement of probable cause for issuance of an arrest warrant or summons in the U.S. District Court for the NMI.

The Office of the Public Auditor and the Office of the Attorney General have recommended that the Department of Lands and Natural Resources cease further negotiations with Nogis on a proposed sole-source contract worth $40,500 as a logistics supervisor/coordinator for a Northern Islands terrestrial and marine survey project.

Public Lands Secretary Oscar M. Babauta also cancelled a $60,000 sole-source contract with Nogis following advice from the OPA and OAG on the restrictions of hiring individuals convicted of federal and local laws. DPL had hired Nogis as a consultant for Northern Islands development projects.

Nogis was convicted in 2004 on federal theft charges.

DFW official named to work on NI project vice Nogis

AG describes general process of contract reviews

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Lands and Natural Resources Secretary Dr. Ignacio Dela Cruz said yesterday a Division of Fish and Wildlife official has been designated to serve as supervisor/coordinator for an ongoing Northern Islands terrestrial and marine survey, replacing Felix R. Nogis.

Dela Cruz said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which is the project grantor, "expressed satisfaction with the performance so far" of DFW acting director Vicente "Ben" Camacho.

"That's very reassuring," Dela Cruz told Saipan Tribune, referring to the statement made by USFWS's Curt Kessler on Camacho's performance as supervisor/coordinator for the project, during a meeting yesterday afternoon.

DLNR had initially proposed a $40,000 sole-source contract for Nogis, doing business as FELNO Consulting Service, as supervisor/coordinator for the survey.

However, the Office of the Attorney General and the Office of the Public Auditor cautioned DLNR against further negotiations with Nogis because of government job restrictions on individuals with local and federal convictions.

Nogis was convicted in 2004 on federal theft charges when he was still executive director of the Workforce Investment Agency.

Public Auditor Michael Pai said Nogis was barred from working for the CNMI government for a period of 10 years.

Buckingham statement

Attorney General Edward Buckingham would not comment yesterday on the OAG's concerns about Nogis' cancelled contract with the Department of Public Lands, as well as the suggestion to cease negotiations on a proposed DLNR contract with Nogis.

Saipan Tribune asked for a copy of the OAG's letter to DPL and DLNR, but Buckingham said this document is covered by attorney-client privilege.

Buckingham, however, gave an overview of the general process that OAG uses "to review all contracts that come in for approval to the Office of the Attorney General."

He said OAG has two attorneys who take turns conducting preliminary reviews. These attorneys review each contract and give the attorney general recommendations.

"Generally, the recommendations are to sign a contract because they don't see no issues. Sometimes it's maybe sign it, maybe not, and if there are some issues... they present those issues for consideration. And in certain other cases, the recommendation is there are sufficient legal concerns to recommend not signing the contract at all. That's what we generally do in terms of contracts. As to the specifics of an individual contract, that's subject to attorney-client privilege and I won't comment further," Buckingham said after a Rotary Club of Saipan meeting at the Hyatt Regency in Garapan.

DPL, DLNR

The Department of Public Lands, which granted a $60,000 sole-source consultant contract to Nogis for Northern Islands development projects, already cancelled the contract due to similar concerns by OPA and OAG.

OAG approved the DPL contract with Nogis in March but later agreed with OPA's interpretation of the law on employment restrictions for those with federal convictions. This prompted DPL to cancel the contract.

DLNR also proposed a sole-source, federally funded contract for Nogis. But OAG sent back the proposed contract to DLNR. This means the proposed DLNR contract for Nogis did not go through.

"Most likely I'm not going to pursue Nogis' contract," said Dela Cruz, as a result of OPA and OAG's suggestions. But he said there's no final decision on the contract yet.

Due to the time sensitive aspect of the Northern Islands biological survey, Dela Cruz said the USFWS and DLNR needed a coordinator for the project.

The DLNR secretary assigned Camacho to perform the services required. Dela Cruz said DLNR is using federal funds to pay for Camacho's services as project coordinator/supervisor.

Meanwhile, some USFWS biologists have completed their surveys of the Northern Islands, while others are still doing surveys.

The USFWS survey is part of the U.S. Department of Defense assessment of the Northern Islands.

'Govt should not directly hire nurses'

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

House Speaker Froilan C. Tenorio (Cov-Saipan) said the government should not directly hire nurses, and continue to rely on private employment agencies.

Tenorio was referring to Sen. Juan M. Ayuyu's (Ind-Rota) statement that the government will directly hire the nurses employed by the Saipan Employment Agency Services, to help avoid future delays in wages.

SEAS has been delayed in paying its 11 nurses and auxiliary staff assigned at the Rota Health Center for four pay periods. But the government also owes SEAS some $200,000 for services rendered by SEAS nurses to the Rota Health Center.

A local law signed on Friday appropriates $16,000 for the payment of SEAS nurses.

"If the administration has the money to hire these people, then why not just give those money to SEAS so they can pay the nurses? I don't want the government to be [directly] hiring nurses anymore. In fact, I want to introduce legislation to go back to what it was before when government hires nurses through [a] manpower company," said Tenorio.

Tenorio said it is more costly for the government to directly hire nurses than source them through employment agencies.

The speaker said the bill he plans to introduce prohibits the government from directly hiring nurses not only on Rota but also on Saipan and Tinian.

The Department of Public Health currently directly employs nurses at the Commonwealth Health Center on Saipan.

"I don't want government to be in the business of looking for housing and accommodation for government employees. I want a contractor or manpower company to be responsible for this. When we hire nurses directly, we have to pay for their housing, and then we have to take care of their transportation from the house to the hospital," he said.

Acting Gov. Eloy S. Inos, in a separate interview yesterday, said the Fitial administration will continue to find ways to maintain nurses at the Rota Health Center but is not entering into direct contracts with any nurses there at this time.

"That's a matter still up on the table as far as services are concerned. We're looking for nurses," he said.

Inos said the issue of contractual obligation should be addressed first.

"We'd rather have them deal with contractual issues with SEAS before we talk about engaging them... before making arrangements," he said.

Rota nurses are still waiting for a decision by the CNMI labor secretary on an appeal filed by SEAS against a decision that permanently bars it from hiring or employing nurses.

Chamber, DOLI meet but no diatribe

The Saipan Chamber of Commerce yesterday expressed optimism that the concerns raised by its members in connection with the implementation of The Resident Workers Fair Compensation Act will be taken into consideration by the CNMI government. Chamber officers met with Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio, Labor Secretary Mark Zachares, key leaders of the legislature and the Attorney General's Office for three hours during which they discussed the proposed amendments to the implementing rules and regulations of Public Law 11-74. The meeting was arranged by Rep. Oscar Babauta, chair of the House Committee on Commerce and Tourism. However, during the consultation meeting there was no mention of the complaints made by the Chamber members on the Department of Labor and Immigration which include inefficiency, incompetence, and prejudice.

Govt forms audit committee

Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio has created the Interagency Coordinating Advisory Group in yet another effort to boost the implementation of recommendations put forward by the Public Auditor's Office. The Coordinating Group was put in place to review all the audit reports prepared by OPA and carry out recommendations. Part of its task is to determine if there is a need to amend existing laws to strengthen compliance of the regulations. Recently the Coordinating Group, led by the Department of Finance, met to track the audit recommendations and findings of OPA, according to the governor's advisor on budget and finance, Michael S. Sablan.

Atalig tells Kumoi: You're out!

Rota—Sen. Richardo S. Atalig yesterday lashed out at Sen. Ramon S. Guerrero, whom he described as "radical," for publicly disclosing his legislative expenditures that he said were justified as the finance department approved them for reimbursements. He said he can no longer work with the Saipan senator in the two committees he chairs following the latter's action. Guerrero was booted out the other day from the committees on Health, Education and Welfare as well as Judiciary, Government and Law. "I am disappointed. I don't trust him," Atalig said in an interview. "He should have come to me first to clarify those expenditures. We should be working together in harmony."

CUC defers selection of 80MW contractor

Rota—With barely two more weeks to go before a mandated deadline, the Commonwealth Utilities Corp. yesterday postponed discussion on the much-delayed power project on Saipan until May 25 where it expects to award the contract to one of the bidders. "A decision will be made during that time," CUC board chair Jesus T. Guerrero told in an interview after a board meeting held at the Rota Health Center cafeteria. Although he declined to give details on what will happen at next week's meeting, he said they will have to come up with a selection soon as the law stipulating installation of the 80-megawatt plant has given them 60 days to do so.

DEQ cites open dump operator

The Division of Environmental Quality recently cited a man for violating the CNMI Solid Waste Management Regulations by operating an open dump. In a notice of violation, DEQ directed Kwung Ki Paik to immediately stop the dump's operation. DEQ claimed demolition debris was stockpiled at a Garapan lot along Beach Road, which was formerly known as 19th Hole Building. "No person shall own or operate a solid waste management facility or perform solid waste management activities without a permit," stated DEQ director John I. Castro Jr., citing regulations.

Bishop: No to Saipan casino

Roman Catholic Bishop Thomas Camacho issued yesterday a stern warning against the proposal to authorize casino operations on Saipan, as contained in a pending legislative initiative at the House of Representatives. "I strongly recommend that we do not only defeat any attempt at introducing casinos to Saipan at this time but to make it clear that we do not wish this matter to be brought up again," said Camacho in a pastoral letter that was read in all Masses at all Catholic churches yesterday. "Why is this issue being brought up again? Is the government desperate for funds? But our governor has told us that our economy is in good shape," he said, referring to Gov. Juan N. Babauta's recent Commonwealth Address where he said that the Commonwealth is "in pretty darn good shape."

The Shrine was rebuilt 25 years ago. The anniversary celebration will be held in conjunction with Saipan's Japanese Society of Northern Mariana Islands Autumn Festival on Oct. 23, 2010.

The Japanese Society of Northern Mariana Islands is a non-profit corporation chartered in July 3, 1985. This year, the Society will observe its 25th term led by chairman Katsushi Nishikawa, vice chairmen Naotugu Suzuki and Yoichi Matsumura and 21 other directors. ## Solving for happiness: A mathematical proof

The only way to take control of your life, raise your standard of living and move beyond merely surviving is to create your own unique product or service that you offer to increasing numbers of people in exchange for the things of value that you desire. This simple formula applies to countries as well as people. A self-sufficient economy has its own products or services of value to export to the world. Similarly, a self-sufficient individual has something of value to exchange in the global marketplace. That thing of value is based on your natural talent, skill, or interest—in other words, your passion!

A few days ago, a friend and reader of this column asked me if I had any suggestions about techniques, philosophies, or something that I could suggest to help her be happier.

I was at once flattered that she asked (I guess I must look happy, or maybe I look so unhappy, that she figured I must be searching, too!) In any event, in my never-ending quest to provide value to others, I promised her I would e-mail something, and I set about figuring out what I could say to help. It occurred to me that there must be a formula, a mathematical approach to happiness, if you will, that anyone could benefit from. So, using my memories of math class, I decided to apply the concept of “proofs” to the concept of happiness!

Solving for “X”

If you remember from Geometry class, to complete a mathematical “proof,” we start with a “problem” or a “given”:

Given: Triangle ABC

and then we have a conclusion to prove:

Prove: The angles of triangle ABC, angles, 1, 2, and 3, sum to 180 degrees.

You proceed through the proof by starting with an assumption, making statements, invoking established geometric laws and postulates, giving reasons, all in a logical sequence, to develop the final conclusion.

Similarly, to solve for happiness, we can start with our own “given” and “problem.”

Given: I am unhappy

Prove: How can I be happy?

We can use the same mathematical strategy starting with some basic assumptions, and making our arguments in a logical sequence. Ready?

■ ■ ■ ■

PROOF 1: What is the cause of unhappiness?

ASSUMPTION: Unhappiness has causes. It is possible to be happy.

ARGUMENT: If you are not happy, it is because there is a flaw in your belief system. Therefore, the way to be happy is to find a belief system that works.

ARGUMENT: Your belief system is composed of your thoughts. Therefore, if unhappiness is caused by a belief system, and if a belief system is merely a set of thoughts, then:

CONCLUSION: Happiness is caused by your thoughts.

[You may rightly ask, “What about my words and actions?” Yes, Thoughts, Words & Deeds are the important trilogy we often talk about. However, since our words and our actions are functions of our thought, we can deal just with the thoughts, and words and actions will take care of themselves.]

■ ■ ■ ■

PROOF 2: What thoughts must I change in order to be happy?

ASSUMPTION: It is possible to identify and change the thoughts that are making you unhappy.

ARGUMENT: There are only four types of thoughts that you have. You think about your self, about others, about the world/universe, and about life's situations.

CONCLUSION: Therefore, your thoughts about: 1. Your Self,

2. Others, 3. The World and 4. Life's Situations must be changed in order for you to be happy.

■ ■ ■ ■

PROOF 3: What specific thoughts about my self are important?

ASSUMPTION: The thoughts about your self cover many facets of your being.

ARGUMENT: When it comes to your self, there are three components we speak most of: Body, Mind and Soul.

ARGUMENT: Also, when it comes to your happiness, there are three states of existence that we speak most of: Being (who you are), Doing (what you do), and Having (what you have)

CONCLUSION: Therefore, your happiness in relation to your self will be a function of and determined by your thoughts (i.e., your belief system) about your body, mind and soul, and about who you are, what you do, and what you have.

Solving for the Self

“To thine own self be true...”

The most important step to take to solve for happiness is to first solve for the self. I suggest to you that the more you learn (i.e. solve) about yourself, the happier you will become. Let me share with you my own experience.

One of the first revelations I experienced about myself occurred as part of team during a sales training course. As part of our orientation to become top sellers in a network marketing business, we all took a personality test. The results of the test categorized us as different types of fish. Some people discovered themselves to be fun-loving “dolphins,” others were money-loving “sharks,” service-oriented “whales,” while I fell among the fact and figure-loving “urchins.”

The point of the test was to impress upon us that different people we would work with—as well as those we would sell to—were motivated by different things. No personality was “better” than another, and all were necessary for the functioning of our team.

Until that moment, I had known these quirks of my personality, but simply felt I was alone in my uniqueness. However, once I realized that my personality type was not unusual, that it was actually composed of identifiable, recognizable, known traits, and that there were others like me, it became easier to accept who I was. I was simply a person more comfortable with facts and figures. I was an urchin!

This explained a lot. It explained why I ended up as a civil engineer. It explained why I was able to recall facts that my schoolmates couldn't. It explained why you could move me to action by providing information rather than by promising me “tons of fun” or “lots of money.” As I become more secure in my personality, my team members knew they could come to me for facts about our products and industry, and that any answer I gave would be correct.

Years later, I took the Meyers Briggs test and found out I was an “INTP” (Introvert, iNtuitive, Thinker, Perceiver). Again, I encountered a set of traits and preferences and aptitudes that described me perfectly, and added a new dimension to my understanding of who I was.

Next came my introduction to the “life themes” concept, where I found the theme I was living was as “teacher.” It explained a lot. It explained why I was drawn to write books that teach others. It explained why I was tutoring other students from as early as 2nd grade (I never went to first grade).

Then, as I mentioned in a previous article, the concept of “soul age” came into my life, and again, provided me with validation of things about myself that added more peace to my life.

Solving for Others

The more I discovered about myself, the more accepting I've become of who I am, and by extension, the more tolerant I became of other people's differences. I no longer expect “dolphins” to be more like “urchins,” or “ESFJs” (Extroverts, Sensors, Feelers, Judgers) to be more like “INTPs,” or healers to be more like “teachers.” We all have our uniqueness, our purposes, our missions, our themes, our traits, our talents, our predispositions, and our unique soul ages that make us different and necessary to the whole.

Knowing more about myself, and then about others had the added benefit of helping me actually predict how people will behave in certain situations. Things have become less of a mystery. Result: different expectations, more happiness.

Conclusion: The only thing you have complete control over in life is how you respond to the people over which you have no control.

Solving for Life's Situations

The single most impactful lessons I learned about life's situations involved the law of cause and effect, the law of attraction, and how to become accountable for the situations that happen in my life.

Many years ago, I took a course called “Life Spring” that introduced me to the concept of personal accountability. “Given that this is happening in your life, what did you do to create and/or attract it, and, more importantly, what are you going to do about it now?” Many people waste time playing the blame game, and instead of responding in ways that create a desired reality, they waste time assigning blame to people or circumstances as the cause for creating the effects in their lives. Sadly, many people never move beyond that level of response to life.

Conclusion: The only thing you have complete control over in life is how you respond to the situations over which you have no control.

Finally

The final, and perhaps most truthful statement about happiness that I ever encountered was that “happiness is an unmet expectation.” In other words, the only reason you are ever unhappy about anything is because you have an expectation that is not in alignment with reality. Husband forgot your anniversary? You're unhappy because you expected him to remember. Change your expectation. Noisy

IN A NUTSHELL*A brief look at sovereignty, the Covenant, self-government, and the economyThird of a five-part series*

In May 1989 officials of the Commonwealth appeared before the United Nations' Trusteeship Council and accused the United States of asserting "imperial territorial claims" over the Commonwealth by trying to turn the islands into a colony. The members of this group urged the United Nations to continue to maintain control over Micronesia until the United States granted full self-government. Again in May 1990 the CNMI's Trust Termination Task Force presented their position before the United Nations that the Commonwealth disagrees with the United States as to its rights under international law. Thus, more than a dozen years after achieving Commonwealth status in affiliation with the United States there was still some confusion as to the extent of the relationship and the degree of self-government and autonomy the CNMI could exercise.

Many issues of the association not otherwise reduced to writing beforehand have resulted in the two bureaucracies requiring an inordinate amount of time and effort to reach agreement on several unresolved matters. For those not a party to the negotiations—and from the sideline—it often appears that the United States negotiators pretend that the islands are the equivalent of a U.S. territory, while the Commonwealth maintains it is a sovereign territory with few limitations, presumably self-imposed restrictions, circumscribed only by the Covenant.

By mid 1991, and after 10 sessions of the "902 consultations," the United States negotiator admitted that he had no authority to renegotiate certain issues and that the Commonwealth should either pursue a resolution of the outstanding issues with the U. S. Congress or seek a federal court ruling.

In July 1991 the Commonwealth government responded to the U.S. Congress Subcommittee on Insular and International Affairs relative to the Commonwealth's views on the following questions:

■ Question: "Is the Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States of America a treaty?" and "If the Covenant is a treaty, does the Territorial Clause of the United States Constitution apply to the Northern Mariana Islands?"

■ CNMI Reply: It is the position of the Commonwealth government that:

- a. "The Covenant to establish the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands has the legal status of a treaty;
- b. The United States entered into the Covenant to satisfy its obligations under the Trusteeship Agreement for the former Japanese Mandated Islands;
- c. The Northern Marianas was not under the sovereignty of the United States when the Covenant was approved; the Government of the United States entered into the Covenant pursuant to its constitutional power to conduct foreign affairs;
- d. The language of the Covenant is language of agreement, not the language of legislation;
- e. The Covenant was negotiated and approved as an agreement, not as a public law;
- f. The federal government has recognized that the Covenant has the legal status of a treaty;
- g. The Covenant does not make the plenary (i.e., complete, absolute, unqualified) powers of the Territorial Clause of the United States Constitution applicable to the Northern Mariana Islands;
- h. The United States did not grant the people of the Northern Mariana Islands their right of self-government by approving the Covenant; the people of the Northern Marianas reserved those rights when they approved the Covenant;
- i. By the Covenant's own terms, the plenary powers of the federal government under the Territorial Clause are not applicable to the Northern Mariana Islands;
- j. The Covenant was negotiated and agreed to in order to satisfy the obligations of the United States under the United Nations Charter and the Trusteeship Agreement; application of plenary powers of the Federal Government under the Territorial Clause to the political union between the United States and the Commonwealth is not consistent with those obligations; the Covenant must be construed harmoniously with the fundamental documents that permitted its negotiation and approval;
- k. Specific grants of legislative power to the federal government in the Covenant would be superfluous if the federal government had plenary powers to legislate under the Territorial Clause;
- l. the Covenant must be construed to give effect to each of its provisions and not to render provisions superfluous;
- m. Section 101 of the Covenant, reciting that the Commonwealth is under the sovereignty of the United States, is not a grant of Territorial Clause powers to the United States;

n. The Territorial Clause is not necessary to provide the federal government with constitutional power to enact legislation necessary and proper to implement the Covenant;

o. Contradictions between the plain language of the Covenant and statements in the negotiating history reflect a purposeful ambiguity that resulted from the failure of the parties to agree on the applicability of the Territorial Clause to the Commonwealth;

p. Ambiguities in the Covenant are to be resolved in favor of the Commonwealth;

q. International law requires United States recognition of the mutually binding character of the Covenant;

r. The Covenant controls the relationship between the United States and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands;

s. The constitutional powers of the federal government with respect to the Northern Mariana Islands are limited by the terms of the agreement that brought the Northern Mariana Islands into the American political family;

t. The government of the United States has the power to enter into a mutually binding agreement that, among other things, reserves and guarantees self-government to an area not under the sovereignty of the United States in order to bring that area into the American political family."

In conclusion the report states, "For the foregoing reasons, it is clear that the Covenant has the legal status of a treaty and that it does not make the Territorial Clause of the Constitution applicable to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. The federal government clearly entered into a lawful and mutually-binding agreement with the people of the Northern Mariana Islands

There are two major issues that have polarized the NMI in recent weeks. They are: 1). Improved status for guest workers here per one of five recommendations in DOI's report for submission to the US Congress. 2). The disposition of Article XII to preserve or repeal it. In each case, proponents and opponents have passionately justified their positions that occasionally border on irrationality.

Be that as it may, these expressions lead back to the trail of failed leadership (over the last 32 years) to engage the thoughtful disposition of matters of state. We've allowed the dictates of the garment industry to take hold over the protection of our rights to self-government. We simply didn't do anything to fix the self-inflicted mess in local control of immigration.

A good portion of the industry is gone! We're now at the brink of losing political control as a result of leadership's failure to guard what's rightfully ours. Playing into the mess was the Department of the Interior's failure to "consult" with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security and the NMI. Interesting that OIA's Tony Babauta quoted USPL 110-229 providing for consultation, but failed to honor such legal mandate. Isn't this a legal fraud committed against our people?

This 11th hour clamor reminds me of what former NMI Supreme Court Justice Jose S. Dela Cruz said in his letter of endorsement for Jesse C. Borja. The latter is one of four candidates for the NMI Delegate's Office. Said he: "At no point in the history of our young commonwealth has our ability to govern ourselves been sorely tested. 'At no point in the history of our commonwealth has our economy performed so dismally, such that, for several years now, essential public services have been greatly compromised. Finally, at no time in the history of our young commonwealth has our relationship with the federal government been so strained, such that the fundamental goals and objectives of the Covenant have been forgotten by both parties to this relationship.'"

For the full version of former Justice Dela Cruz's letter, please see www.sijessenai2010.com. I could present a longish lamentation how we've screwed and neglected issues of substance for so long.

But that would be academic now. However, there certainly is a lot of room to regroup and trump our cards so we can focus on issues of substance. It's time to begin electing fully rounded leadership with integrity, real credentials and vision to guide the NMI in these woefully trying times.

Confidence and trust are definitely lacking in the daily vocabulary of our people these days. It's time to begin recapturing our island community so as to lay out a firm and prosperous future for our children. It begins with the self and your pencil in polling places henceforth. To be fair, check the Web sites of other candidates so you can compare notes and other relevant information you need to know before Nov. 2nd.

We've used the fatal mouthwash of "culture" as the panacea to maintain the indigenous cultural traditions by promoting retainment of Article XII. Others say it has served its purpose and, therefore merits repeal in its entirety.

If I may point out: The disqualification of our very own people from landownership who weren't here in the '50s, the imposition of blood quantum, and the denial of full landownership are far removed from the cultural traditions of the islands.

Indigenous culture is founded on the concept of "communal sharing" where we look out after one another, indigenous or otherwise, in our collective effort to spread the cultural spirit of harmony. Denying our very own their rights to own land or displacing them through the blood quantum requirement isn't cultural either. It's a protectionist and regressive policy that doesn't augur well with what really is cultural.

If there were truth to our claim about protecting the indigenous culture, then we would have acted responsibly and unequivocally to guarding local control of immigration from A-Z. But we failed by turning our heads the other way, you know, the "I saw nothing, heard nothing, didn't know anything" syndrome. The very industry we slaved to protect is gone! Local control over immigration is also gone! What else is there to protect the indigenous culture and the so-called "self-government" other than spout racist rhetoric that turns thoughtful discussion into ugly taboo?

It would seem very difficult for the NMI to justify the landownership concept for as long as it is individually owned. Courts have ruled in favor of American Samoa's "clan", Native American "tribes" and others similarly situated. Here, there's the pattern of individual landownership. Therefore, it's next to impossible to defend using culture as a tool to bluff our way through an argument that hardly holds water.

Some have deferred to the UN Declaration of Indigenous Rights. That could stand a chance if the indigenous people here were robbed of their land by the U.S. But there was the return of public land in the '70s that gave the NMI control of its precious public property. The U.S. also paid for damages to land during and after the war. The UN Trusteeship agreement to which the U.S. is a signatory honors the principle of landownership inherent under the U.S. Constitution.

Perhaps the next best thing that we must focus on is how do we take our people out of the miseries of slavery in our apparent inability to work and defend our rights within the confines of the Covenant agreement. It's a positive step in the right direction that is non-confrontational and beneficial to both sides of the Pacific Divide. This is a better paradigm over the usual "command and control" that envenoms our friends as to make us their adversaries. Let's join hands and develop constructive engagement while establishing and nurturing a network of friends between here and Washington. Si Yuus Maase'!

Promoting a coalition of the willing

I started tooting my horn while driving in the opposite direction as Sunday's Unity Movement motorcade began from Kili Beach to the Mei Guo Gong Yuan (American Memorial Park), to indicate my solidarity with the movement. At the initial march two years ago, I had the raise-the-middle-finger urge after a particularly noxious immigration and labor legislation passed Capital Hill. After colleagues on stage spoke, I decided to be my disestablishment self when asked to say a few words and invited the public to pronounce the words Shen Jing Ping with me. The Chinese in the crowd smirked; the words meant "crazy" with pejorative connotations!

I was pleasantly pleased this time when one of the marshals approached my pickup and gently reminded me that there were not going to be any honking of horns during the parade. The organizers evidently had enough presence of mind to plan the procession as a solemn and stately occasion. Light was to prevail over blare in the din of the belligerent; my headlights went a-beaming on the confused.

One of the organizers advised members to stick to the theme of gratitude to the CNMI for the opportunity of legally joining the islands' family, and that of the federal American Union. A two-edged sword in the pen of our prolific letter-to-the-editor writer Malou Berueco, not generally known for conciliatory pronouncements, but she pointed out that there is much to be grateful for across the divide that separate sentiments on the granting of improved immigration status to long-term legal "aliens" in the CNMI.

The term "legal" is, of course, the defining term in the whole conversation because the impression abroad is that the feds and their cohorts are cuddling insidious and subversive illegals so that they can be accommodated into the current nebulous situation and further dilute the possible electoral make-up of CNMI politics that threatens those who are, or identified with, the local ethnic indigenes (aka DNA in-da-genes!), and thereby, feel that local decision-making is their prerogative.

We have enough resident and fly-by-night legal minds that would sportingly turn the possible congressional legislative wordings and follow-up regulatory write-ups as the arena of contentious play, if we let them. The other option, of course, is the forgotten island practice of cooperation and collaboration—cultural traits that, for all the boisterous bluster that the islands are losing the cultural heritage in the possible repeal of the land alienation provision, have been abandoned in the forsaken ways of the tao tao tano once-upon-a-time familiar sea lanes.

There is an African saying that is appropriate to our situation: "If you wish to travel fast, go alone; if you wish to go far, travel together!" To demonstrate that this is a human truth not inherent in mere ethnicity, a silent but effective practitioner of this trait is Tim Thornburg, the Explore-all-Possibilities Federal Grants officer of PSS. He likes to focus on advantages rather than limitations, a good indication of why the administration and management of PSS federal grants is a model in the Pacific.

In any given situation, the perspectives of limits and possibilities are necessary. Knowledge and obedience of limits ground one to reality as presently conceived, but it is possibilities that captures energy and fuels enthusiasm. In the design of policies, programs, projects—the allocation of personnel and funds—limits need not burden and overwhelm the freedom and creativity of the imagination to turn possibilities into tangible flights of fancy and show courage to navigate the course of untried horizons, as the tao tao tasi once did!

It is helpful that Thornburg practices his trade in the emerging PSS culture of broad participatory involvement of teachers, parents, students and community leaders in the site management of local schools, coupled with the decisiveness (the Just do it! ethos) of executive functions, and a loosening of board deliberations to transparent openness and wider accountability. My continuing issues with PSS, which often find expression on this page, were affirmed when asked of my institutional affiliation in my recent travels; I did not hesitate to call PSS home.

Two learnings that need to permeate our educational system: one, is the wisdom that the relational nature of personal discourse is essential, a not altogether foreign notion in our native understanding. We do treat each other as human beings with name/face identities (e.g., Social Studies teacher Mr. V), not as individualized units of them to. You could actually choose to smile, when the racket starts next door. Anytime you cling to an expectation that is not in alignment with reality or truth, you are creating your own unhappiness, and you have the ability to create the opposite state by choosing a new reaction.

The Ultimate Key

So, therefore, the ultimate key to happiness is this: "Something you believe to be true, and thus your expectation about (fill in the blank) is not in alignment with reality and/or truth. Change the belief and the Northern Mariana Islands."

If you have read this far and accept the NMI's position as stated above, it would appear that some people in the NMI hold the belief the United States has for all intent and purpose adopted what would seem to amount to the equivalent of a semi-foreign country, cloaked it in the American flag as existing under some, but not all, laws of the United States.

an abstract category (e.g., an SVES teacher). This is the incentive for smaller classroom sizes in the school factory mills. There is no substitute in the learning process than a child feeling that his/her individual effort is recognized, and that it matters!

Two, we note the associational nature of our social networks. I once pointed out that the Association of Commonwealth Teachers is exactly what its name calls it, an association. We are associates, of equal footing as members, with differing roles and functions by group selection or self-election. When associates gather, they are best served in a roundtable mindset (if the physical arrangement would reflect this understanding, better) where the power is in the middle of the room rather than on the presider, facilitator, and convener up front.

Needless to say, when leaders are considered as upfront experts where they, like sales personnel, present their wares and members are consumers of their proficiency, we have difficulties with the movemental nature of facilitative leaders. Leadership is a service of convening and facilitating. Tina Sablan and Glen Hunter tried making their sunrise and sunset conversations systemic but their efforts were short of partners to reach critical mass; however, they got us started.

"You drew the line that kept us apart; I drew a circle that kept us together." With the polarization of locals and aliens, I am encouraged by the use of the symbol of "umbrella" to shade our island togetherness until 11.30.11. Without blurring defining lines, we can remain within the same circle under the same coverage. We can disagree all we want, without necessarily being disagreeable! Will do.

the expectation, and create your happiness. For Happiness is merely a thought."

PART 2: APPLYING THE PROOF

In Part 2, we will explore several specific examples of how to apply this key to your self (i.e. body, mind and soul, who you are, what you do, and what you have), to Others, The World and Life's Situations, and solve for happiness!

neighbors? You're unhappy because you expect everyone to value peace and quiet the way you do. Change your expectation.

Now, I'm not saying you don't have a right to be disappointed when certain things happen. What I'm saying is that you also are able to make a choice as to how to respond. You could actually choose to be tolerant when others don't behave the way you'd like

Scientists worry current could carry oil to Keys

ROBERT, La. (AP)—With BP finally gaining some control over the amount of oil spewing into the Gulf of Mexico, scientists are increasingly worried that huge plumes of crude already spilled could get caught in a current that would carry the mess all the way to the Florida Keys and beyond, damaging coral reefs and killing wildlife.

Scientists said the oil will move into the so-called loop current soon if it hasn't already, though they could not say exactly when or how much there would be. Once it is in the loop, it could take 10 days or longer to reach the Keys.

"It's only a question of when," said Peter Ortner, a University of Miami oceanographer.

In the month since an offshore drilling platform exploded, killing 11 workers, BP has struggled to stop the leak, trying in vain to activate emergency valves and lowering a 100-ton box that got clogged with icy crystals. Over the weekend, the oil company finally succeeded in using a stopper-and-tube combination to siphon some of the gushing oil into a tanker, but millions of gallons are already in the Gulf.

The loop current is a ribbon of warm water that begins in the Gulf of Mexico and wraps around Florida. Some scientists project the current will draw the crude through the Keys and then up Florida's Atlantic Coast, where the oil might avoid the beaches of Miami and Fort Lauderdale but could wash up around Palm Beach.

Many scientists expect the oil to get no farther north than Cape Canaveral, midway up the coast, before it is carried out to sea and becomes more and more diluted.

The pollution could endanger Florida's shoreline mangroves, seagrass beds and the third-longest barrier reef in the world, the 221-mile-long Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary, which helps draw millions of snorkelers, fishermen and other tourists whose dollars are vital to the state's economy.

GM roars back to profit, but can it repay gov't?

DETROIT (AP)—In less than a year, General Motors Co. has roared back from bankruptcy to a quarterly profit. Now comes the hard part: Sustaining the income and repaying billions of dollars in government aid.

There are signs that GM is on track to do just that. Revenue is up 40 percent over the first quarter of last year. U.S. sales rose 17 percent for the quarter, and the automaker made an operating profit in North America, which had been a cash incinerator.

Units in Asia and Latin America posted strong numbers, too.

As a result, the automaker announced Monday, its net income rose to $865 million, a dramatic reversal from the $6 billion the company lost in the same period last year.

"Today's news was wonderful, and even better than we ever expected to be this far in the post-restructuring period," said Steven Rattner, former head of the Obama administration's Auto Task Force.

To keep GM afloat and get it through bankruptcy court, the U.S. government gave the company $50 billion. GM repaid $6.7 billion that the government considered loans, with the remaining $43.3 billion converted to a 61 percent stake in the automaker.

For the Treasury to break even, GM will have to make a lot more money and show prospects for even more profits in the future for its shares to be worth enough to cover the debt.

may increase—albeit marginally—the chances of developing a rare but deadly form of brain cancer. What is more, since cancers takes years, even decades to develop—longer than cell phones have been in widespread use—even the study's authors say there is no way yet to tell how big the risk is, if there is one. Experts were nearly unanimous in saying the results of the study are inconclusive. But the fact that it turned up even some evidence of an increased cancer risk may cause some disquiet among people who have become accustomed to seeing the device as extensions of themselves.

Eurozone nations defend currency union

BRUSSELS (AP)—Eurozone finance ministers defended the euro as a "credible" currency on Tuesday, despite its slide to four-year lows against the dollar, as they sought to tame the fears that have gripped financial markets in recent weeks. Investors fear that as European nations make painful spending cuts to rein in their swelling debt, growth will be stifled for years to come. There are also concerns that governments' rescue efforts for debt-laden EU countries, combined with the European Central Bank's move to buy government bonds, could cause inflation to rise. Those worries have helped fuel the euro's fall to the lowest level against the dollar since April 2006 and hiked the price of gold, traditionally a safe haven when markets lose faith in other assets.

Ariz. immigration law divides police across US

PHOENIX (AP)—Arizona's tough new law cracking down on illegal immigration is dividing police across the nation, pitting officers against their chiefs and raising questions about its potential to damage efforts to fight crime in Hispanic communities.

Two officers are challenging the law in court, while police unions that lobbied for it are defending it against criticism from police officials.

Both sides are debating how a law such as Arizona's can be enforced, without leading to racial profiling of Hispanics and without alienating residents in Hispanic neighborhoods with whom police have spent years trying to build trust.

"Before the signing of this bill, citizens would wave at me," said David Salgado, a 19-year Phoenix police officer who sued the city and the governor asking that the law be blocked. "Now they don't even want to make eye contact."

Still, police unions say, many of their officers in Arizona, the nation's busiest corridor for illegal immigration and smuggling, are tired of feeling helpless when dealing with people they believe are in the country illegally. Those officers want a tool to arrest them.

"Crime is not based upon skin color, it's based upon conduct," said Mark Spencer, president of the Phoenix Law Enforcement Association, the union representing Phoenix officers that lobbied aggressively for the law.

It requires police enforcing another law to verify a person's immigration status if there's "reasonable" suspicion they are in the U.S. illegally.

Court rules out some life sentences for juveniles

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court took two cracks at one of the law's thorniest questions Monday: When can you lock up a prisoner and throw away the key? Not when it's a teenager who hasn't killed anyone, the justices said. But when it's a "sexually dangerous" inmate, maybe so, even if he has completed his federal prison sentence.

By a 5-4 vote, the court said young people serving life prison terms must have "a meaningful opportunity to obtain release" if they haven't killed their victims.

The majority opinion by Justice Anthony Kennedy extended the "children are different" rationale that drove his decision five years ago that outlawed the death penalty for killers under 18.

The court ruled in the case of Terrance Graham, who was implicated in armed robberies when he was 16 and 17. Graham, now 23, is in prison in Florida, which holds 60 percent of juvenile defendants who are locked up for life for crimes other than homicide.

"The state has denied him any chance to later demonstrate that he is fit to rejoin society based solely on a non-homicide crime that he committed while he was a child in the eyes of the law," Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote in his majority opinion. "This the Eighth Amendment does not permit."

In a second case, the court voted 7-2 to uphold a federal law that allows for the indefinite imprisonment of inmates considered mentally ill and "sexually dangerous," no matter that their sentences have been served.

Lawyer: Video shows police fired into Detroit home

DETROIT (AP)—Police who carried out a raid on a family home that left a 7-year-old girl dead over the weekend were accompanied by a camera crew for a reality television show, and an attorney says video of the siege contradicts the police account of what happened.

Geoffrey Fieger, an attorney for the family of young Aiyana Jones, said he has seen three or four minutes of video of the raid, although he declined to say whether it was shot by the crew for the A&E series "The First 48," which has been shadowing Detroit homicide detectives for months.

Police have said officers threw a flash grenade through the first-floor window of the two-family home, and that an officer's gun discharged, killing the girl, during a struggle or after colliding with the girl's grandmother inside the home.

But Fieger said the video shows an officer lobbing the grenade and then shooting into the home from the porch.

"There is no question about what happened because it's in the videotape," Fieger said. "It's not an accident. It's not a mistake. There was no altercation."

"Aiyana Jones was shot from outside on the porch. The videotape shows clearly the officer throwing through the window a stun grenade-type explosive and then within milliseconds of throwing that, firing a shot from outside the home," he said.

Treasury takes $1.6 billion loss on Chrysler loan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Treasury Department said Monday it will lose $1.6 billion on a loan made to Chrysler in early 2009. Taxpayer losses from bailing out Chrysler and General Motors are expected to rise as high as $34 billion, congressional auditors have said. Treasury said Monday that Chrysler repaid $1.9 billion of a $4 billion loan, which was extended before the company filed for Chapter 11. The government hopes to get another $500 million from the company that emerged from bankruptcy, Chrysler Group LLC. Treasury officials said that the government had no plans to boost its stake in the new Chrysler to cover those losses. It also acknowledged another $1.9 billion in potential losses from a separate loan that had been made to the company that went through bankruptcy proceedings. It indicated slim hopes of recouping much if anything from that separate $1.9 billion loan.

Study on cell phone link to cancer inconclusive

GENEVA (AP)—If there's one lifestyle tool that's ubiquitous, from American cities to remote villages of the developing world, it's the mobile phone. But with its meteoric rise came concerns about safety and whether it can cause brain tumors. The frustratingly unresolved debate erupted again this week with the release of a $24 million U.N. study covering 13 nations that suggests frequent cell phone use

US court grants asylum to Obama's African aunt

CLEVELAND (AP)—A U.S. immigration court has granted asylum to President Barack Obama's African aunt, allowing her to stay in the country and setting her on the road to citizenship after years of legal wrangling, her attorneys announced Monday. The decision was made by a judge in U.S. Immigration Court in Boston and mailed out Friday. It comes three months after Kenya native Zeituni Onyango, the half-sister of Obama's late father, testified at a closed hearing in Boston. People who seek asylum must show that they face persecution in their homeland on the basis of religion, race, nationality, political opinion or membership in a social group.

Air Force: Tests didn't include troubled GPS unit

DENVER (AP)—The military did no advance testing on a specific type of military GPS receiver that had problems picking up locator signals after a change in ground-control software, the Air Force said Monday. The Air Force tested other equipment, but none of it contained the type of receiver that was unable to lock on to Global Positioning System satellites after the change, said Joe Davidson, a spokesman for the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Center. The manufacturer of the receivers, Trimble Advanced and Military Systems, said it ran its own advance tests using specifications from the Air Force GPS Wing and found no problems.

US officials begin review of New Orleans police

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Federal authorities launched a top-to-bottom review of the troubled New Orleans Police Department on Monday, a probe requested by Mayor Mitch Landrieu, who predicted it will result in court-ordered transformation of a department beleaguered by allegations of sometimes deadly brutality. Assistant U.S. Attorney General Tom Perez said the investigation will include lawyers and non-lawyers with broad experience in police issues. At a news conference with Landrieu, Perez said the probe will be independent of ongoing federal criminal investigations of the department. Those include the probe of the fatal 2005 shootings of unarmed citizens at the Danziger bridge in the chaotic aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Perez, who heads the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, said other such independent examinations by the department have resulted in successful change at other cities' police departments, including Los Angeles.

Hopes for brokered talks in Thailand

BANGKOK (AP)—Hopes rose Tuesday for an end to deadly mayhem in Thailand's capital as leaders of a protest movement occupying central Bangkok said they would unconditionally accept an offer by the Thai Senate to mediate talks.

Scattered violence continued Tuesday in the standoff between soldiers and anti-government Red Shirt protesters that has killed 37 people in the past six days.

The country's upper house of Parliament on Monday offered to broker negotiations between the warring sides providing they both stopped that fighting that has transformed large swaths of downtown Bangkok to a war zone.

A Red Shirt leader, Weng Tojirakarn, told a news conference "we accept the proposal from the Senate." Another protest leader, Nattawut Saikua, said, "It would not be right if I set conditions for the Senate."

It was not immediately known whether the government had agreed to the Senate talks.

In perhaps the most hopeful of recent signs that Thailand's two-month-long crisis could be resolved, both sides Monday evening also revealed that the government's chief negotiator and a Red Shirt leader had discussed negotiations in a mobile telephone call.

AP
Onlookers watch from an overhead bridge as smoke billows during a clash between anti-government protesters and Thai army in Bangkok, Thailand, Monday, May 17, 2010.

But previous attempts to negotiate an end to the standoff—which has destabilized a country once regarded as one of Southeast Asia's most stable democracies—have failed. A government offer earlier this month to hold November elections foundered after protest leaders made more demands.

Meanwhile, violence continued unabated on Bangkok's streets with security forces arresting a 12-year-old boy Tuesday morning for allegedly setting fire to several houses during the mayhem.

At least 37 people—mostly civilians—have been killed and 266 wounded since the government began a blockade last Thursday on a sprawling protesters' camp in the heart of Bangkok. Most of the unrest has flared outside the camp, with troops firing live ammunition at roaming protesters who have lit fires to hide their positions.

Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva's administration gave the anti-government demonstrators, who have been entrenched in the upscale Rajprasong district for more than a month, a Monday afternoon deadline to leave or face two-year prison terms.

By Tuesday, there was still no exodus among the estimated 3,000 protesters remaining at the camp, and no sign of troops trying to break through their tire-and-bamboo barricades.

Rebels blow up bus in India, killing at least 35

NEW DELHI (AP)—Maoist rebels blew up a bus filled with police and civilians Monday as it drove through central India, killing at least 35 people, police said.

Nineteen civilians and 16 police officers were killed in the attack that took place in the state of Chhattisgarh, which has been the site of fierce fighting between the Maoists and government forces in recent months, said Amarnath Upadhyaya, a senior police officer.

The bus was hit by a rebel land mine, said Rajender Kumar Vij, another top police official in the area.

Police often ride in civilian buses, apparently in an attempt to avoid rebel attack—hoping that the insurgents would not target such vehicles for fear of losing local support.

Amarnath Upadhyaya, another senior police officer, said the front of the bus was destroyed and 40 to 60 people were on board.

The Press Trust of India reported that at least 40 people were killed in the attack.

Television images from the scene showed the bus completely wrecked by the blast and the bodies and police officers' weapons strewn across the road in Dantewada district, about 350 miles (560 kilometers) south of Raipur, the capital of Chhattisgarh state.

India's Home Secretary G.K. Pillai did not give a death toll but said seven people were taken to a hospital in serious condition.

Attacks by the Maoists, known as Naxalites, have been increasing in recent months.

of the explosion in western Kabul indicated that U.S. vehicles were targeted, said Abdul Ghafor Sayedzada, the chief of the city police's criminal investigation unit. The area around the blast site is also home to Afghan government buildings. An Associated Press reporter on the scene saw the wreckage of a public bus and four sport utility vehicles. The SUVs were painted white and grey but no markings identifying them as American were immediately discernable.

1 dead, 5 wounded in latest China rampage attack

BEIJING (AP)—A cleaver-wielding man killed one woman and wounded five before jumping to his death, police said Tuesday, in the latest in a series of rampage attacks in China. The attack follows five separate assaults by lone assailants against schoolchildren in recent weeks that have left 17 dead and more than 50 wounded. According to a police news release, Sunday night's attack began around 7:00 p.m. when 20-year-old Xie Yulin hacked at a woman outside a restaurant in the southern city of Foshan.

RP rebels free town mayor, 4 bodyguards

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Communist guerrillas have freed a Philippine town mayor and his four bodyguards after 12 days of jungle captivity in which the rebels interrogated him and he lived in constant fear of gunfire—and snakes, he said Tuesday. Mayor Roberto Luna and his security guards—two army soldiers and two policemen—were turned over by about 30 heavily armed New People's Army guerrillas to local officials late Monday in a mountain jungle in southern Davao Oriental province during a downpour, Luna said. The rebels freed Luna, who has diabetes, on humanitarian grounds and after negotiating with Gov. ## Iran to ship uranium to Turkey in nuclear deal

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Iran agreed Monday to ship much of its low-enriched uranium abroad and then rolled out a new obstacle to nuclear compromise by insisting it would press ahead with higher enrichment—bringing it closer to being able to make atomic warheads.

The deal forged with Turkey and Brazil appeared to be another attempt to stave off U.N. sanctions—a doubtful endeavor judging by reactions from the United States and other Western powers.

The White House showed deep skepticism about the pact, warning it still allows Iran to keep enriching uranium toward the pursuit of a nuclear weapon.

“Given Iran’s repeated failure to live up to its own commitments, and the need to address fundamental issues related to Iran’s nuclear program, the United States and international community continue to have serious concerns,” White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said.

Still, by involving Turkey and Brazil, Iran ramped up the pressure on Washington over additional U.N. sanctions.

The deal moves these two influential Security Council members closer to Tehran and presents the U.S. and its Western allies with a bloc of developing nations that back Iran’s right to pursue a nuclear program.

In announcing the accord, Brazilian Foreign Minister

Celso Amorim and his Turkish counterpart, Ahmet Davutoglu, said Tehran has the right to “a full nuclear fuel cycle, including enrichment activities for peaceful purposes” and condemned any new sanctions against Iran.

Both countries are important for Washington—Brazil is South America’s largest nation and has a dominant role on the continent, while Turkey, a key NATO ally and a traditional regional U.S. mainstay, has moved to develop an increasingly independent voice.

While they have no Security Council veto, both are skeptical of the U.S.-led drive for a fourth set of Security Council sanctions to punish Tehran’s refusal to stop its enrichment activities.

And the Iranian maneuver could weaken growing resolve by Russia and China—which do have veto power—to support new sanctions.

Moscow and Beijing were responsible for watering down the language of previous anti-Iran sanctions but appeared to swing behind the U.S., Britain and France recently.

British officials relax safety rules over ash

LONDON (AP)—Aviation authorities introduced relaxed flight safety rules Monday to minimize more disruptions caused by a volcano eruption in Iceland, as three of Europe’s busiest airports reopened after a dense volcanic ash cloud dissipated.

Britain’s Civil Aviation Authority said it agreed with airlines, regulators and engine manufacturers on new rules that would let planes fly for a limited time through higher ash densities than currently allowed. The rules—which go into effect mid-day Tuesday—are subject to airlines getting a guarantee from their engine makers that their aircraft can safely tolerate the ash.

The body said that so far British budget carrier Flybe was the only airline that satisfied those conditions, but it expected other airlines to follow soon and European authorities to introduce similar rules.

British air traffic control company NATS said the new rules meant that restrictions on British airspace could now be eased.

“There is mounting evidence that aircraft can fly safely through areas of medium density, provided some additional precautions are taken. This is now what has been agreed,” the company’s CEO Richard Deakin said. “As a result of this change, there are no predicted restrictions on U.K. airspace in the immediate future.”

London’s Heathrow and Gatwick airports and Amsterdam’s Schiphol Airport—some of Europe’s biggest air travel hubs—reopened Monday after they closed because of volcanic ash worries. All three warned travelers it would take time for airlines to clear the backlog of delayed flights and to contact their airlines before going to the airport.

All British, Scottish and Irish airspace will remain open at least until early Tuesday, but airspace over the North Sea was still restricted, affecting some helicopter operations.

Marchers decry Haiti leader for quake response

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Haitian protesters marched to the collapsed national palace for a second straight Monday to criticize President Rene Preval, saying he failed the nation in the aftermath of its catastrophic earthquake. At least 1,000 people marched to the center of the wrecked capital, where local police and U.N. peacekeepers stood guard. Tens of thousands more watched from the plastic-tarp-covered plots where they have lived since the Jan. 12 disaster. The protesters said that Preval has failed to help an estimated 1.5 million people left homeless by the quake and that he overstepped his authority by saying he would remain in office for up to three months beyond his term if elections cannot be held by late November.

US missionary convicted in Haiti, but free to go

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—The last of 10 Americans detained while trying to take 33 children out of Haiti after the Jan. 12 earthquake was freed Monday when a judge convicted her but sentenced her to time already served in jail. Laura Silsby, the organizer of the ill-fated effort to take the children to an orphanage being set up in the neighboring Dominican Republic, returned to her cell briefly to retrieve belongings before quickly heading to the Port-au-Prince airport. “I’m praising God,” Silsby told The Associated Press as she waited for a flight out of Haiti. She declined to answer further questions before clearing immigration and heading through a gate to catch a plane to Florida.

Report: Nigeria’s police brutalize, kill suspects

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Nigeria’s federal police force kills with impunity, extorts those it’s charged to protect and rapes arrested prostitutes as a “fringe benefit” of the job, a report by a civil liberties group alleges. The Open Society Justice Initiative’s report released Monday is the latest stain on Nigeria’s corrupt and maligned police force, which at its mildest merely demands bribes from motorists at roadblocks. At its worst, the report alleges the police rub chemical mace and hot chili pepper into the genitals of those it arrests, drawing out dubious confessions officers use as an excuse to summarily execute those they describe as “armed robbers.”

Five JROTC battalions loosen up in military ball

After three years of waiting, the CNMI Multiple School Unit Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps Military Ball was once again hosted by the Saipan Southern High School's Manta Ray Battalion, under the command of cadet Lt. Col. Ruby Anne E. Reyes, at the Royal Taga Ballroom of the Saipan World Resort on May 8, 2010—just a day before Mother's Day. The event was attended by about 300 people.

The Ball was organized to bring cadets from all of the five CNMI battalions together so they could mingle, get acquainted, reconnect, and remind each other of the main mission of the JROTC program, which is to motivate young people to be better citizens.

The formal event was well attended and had several distinguished guests such as Education Commissioner Dr. Rita A. Sablan; the director of Army Instruction, Lt. Col. Robert Gay; the five CNMI high schools' principals and vice principals; Sgt. Maj. Jesus Muña, director of Customs Services; Ray Tigilau, PSS program manager for the Social Studies Department; and former Education Commissioner Dr. David Borja, who surprised many cadets with his service uniform.

The SSHS Manta Ray Battalion Color Guard posted the colors. Cadets Maj. Genelin Camacho and Capt. Rachel Sumor performed hosting duties. The Inatuas Cultural Dance Group performed and had some cadets who are members of the group dance with them, including cadet Capt. Welinton David, the Bravo company commander of the Manta Ray Battalion.

2Lt. Joseph Sablan from the University of Guam SROTC spoke to the room that he is very proud to be one of the graduated cadets of the CNMI MSU JROTC, while Dr. Sablan gave recognition to the Army instructors that handle the program. Cadet Capt. Mark San Juan, the Battalion special projects officer of the SSHS Manta Ray Battalion, also prepared a movie presentation that featured the different battalions.

Manta Ray Battalion commander cadet Lt. Col. Ruby Anne E. Reyes reminded her fellow cadets of the true definition and challenges of leadership, quoting

John Wooden: "Ability may take you to the top, but it takes character to keep you there."

The night's guest speaker was Ranger Nancy Ann Kelchner of the American Memorial Park, who said that, although a leader can possess loyalty, duty, re-

Tinian's Stallion Battalion retains 2010 Academic Challenge trophy

Just 12 hours after the end of the CNMI MSU JROTC Military Ball, cadets joined once again for another event—the JROTC Academic Challenge—that was held on May 9, 2010, Mother's Day. It was attended by 30 cadets, composed of six per school. The competition's purpose was to test the cadets' knowledge of the JROTC curriculum and challenge their test-taking capabilities. The contest was held at the classroom 1 of Saipan Southern High School JROTC and lasted from 10am to 11am, although the cadets had to be there by 9am.

The winner of the competition is the incumbent champion, Tinian High School Stallion Battalion.

The questions were presented via the Classroom Performance Systems and were extracted from what the cadets should know from experience and books. The questions were chosen and approved by all instructors.

Lunch was provided afterwards and the Rota High School Buck Battalion and Tinian High School Stallion Battalion cadets returned home.

Congratulations to Tinian High School Stallion Battalion and to all of the participants! Remember, you are all winners! (Cadet Maj. Genelin Anne Camacho)

Fox vows to boost 'Idol' in outlining new season

NEW YORK (AP)—Fox executives promised to boost a sagging “American Idol” as they confidently outlined plans on Monday for a new season and declared the network the one that “delivers America’s favorite shows.”

Fox is making a special effort to establish new comedies next season, introducing shows that feature Keri Russell and Cloris Leachman. Its big-ticket drama is a fantasy adventure series from Steven Spielberg, although executives conceded there’s a chance it won’t be ready next season. Fox will finish the 2009-10 TV season as the second most popular network behind CBS but first among the 18-to-49-year-old audience it targets for a record sixth straight year. Its executives told advertisers on Monday that they won’t see a richer, more diverse array of programming from another network during this week of schedule announcements.

“Fox delivers America’s favorite shows,” said Peter Rice, entertainment chairman of the Fox Networks Group.

Still, its most compelling mystery for next season remains: Who will replace Simon Cowell when he leaves “American Idol” this month?

That search is top priority for Fox this summer, Rice said.

“We have to find a judge to replace

Simon who provides both musical credibility and an incredible entertainment value,” he said. “Anytime you have a change, it’s something you have to do right.”

While it’s still television’s favorite show, “American Idol” has seen its ratings drop by 8 percent this season, according to the Nielsen Co. In response to viewer requests for more performances, Fox will increase the Tuesday night competition show from an hour to 90 minutes. The Wednesday results show will be chopped in half to 30 minutes.

Fox is giving extra attention to “Glee” in its second season, even though fans will get a scheduling challenge. A special episode of the show will get the prime post-Super Bowl time slot next season.

“Glee” will air Tuesdays at 8 p.m. in the fall, ahead of two new comedies. After the Super Bowl, it will switch to Wednesdays at 9 p.m., following the “American Idol” results show.

Arab-Americans delight in Miss USA victory

NEW YORK (AP)—Donald Trump’s Miss USA pageant sure knows how to make headlines.

Arab-Americans rejoiced Monday over the crowning of raven-haired beauty Rima Fakih, a 24-year-old Lebanese immigrant from Michigan, calling it a victory for diversity in the United States, especially at a time when Arabs suffer from negative stereotypes in this country—and anti-immigrant sentiment is in the news.

Meanwhile, some harsh critics wondered if Trump’s Miss USA organization was trying to send a message, sniping that the victory amounted to “affirmative action,” or implying the first runner-up, Miss Oklahoma USA, suffered unfairly because of an answer she gave supporting Arizona’s new immigration law.

All this comes, of course, a year after 2009 runner-up Carrie Prejean and her views on gay marriage dominated the headlines. Suddenly it seemed like the pageant had become a battleground, albeit in bikinis and flesh-baring gowns, for the hot-button political and social issues of the day.

If all that weren’t enough, photos emerged of Fakih pole-dancing in skimpy shorts and a tank top in a radio show contest in 2007. The show’s producers said they’d been contacted by representatives of the Miss Universe contest requesting more photographs and information. But the show also noted—correctly—that the photos were no more provocative than anything on the Miss USA website.

In any case, Arab-Americans were elated by the victory of Fakih, who was born into a powerful Shiite family in southern Lebanon and whose family said they celebrate both the Muslim and Christian faiths.

“With all the stigma that goes around—especially after 9/11 and how people portray Muslims and Arab-Americans—it’s just a great way to knock down all those barriers,” said Dewnya Bakri-Bazzi, 22, a Muslim law student from Dearborn, Mich., who updated her Facebook status to read, “woot woot who knows maybe I can be the next Miss America?”

Abed Ayoub, the legal director for the Washington-based Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee, called the win significant. “It shows our country’s diversity and the opportunity it offers all citizens.”

He decried the negative blog postings as “disgusting.”

“Rima had a great event,” he said. “Her religion and race was not an issue during the competition, and I hope not during the judging either. She won on beauty, elegance and eloquence.”

Not that Fakih and her family hadn’t been prepared for negative publicity. Even before the pageant, Ayoub said, when Fakih had won her state pageant, his group had helped prepare the family.

“We told the family they should expect this,” Ayoub said. “We told them that some people spew hatred. But she was strong. She held her ground.”

Pageant officials said their records were not detailed enough to show whether Fakih was the first Arab-American, Muslim or immigrant to win the Miss USA title. The pageant started in 1952 as a local bathing suit competition in Long Beach, Calif.

A winner in the 1980s may have had a Lebanese parent, Ayoub said, but having a winner of Arab descent was exceedingly rare nonetheless. The group’s regional director in Dearborn, Mich., Fakih’s hometown, said the victory was especially sweet given the current political climate.

“We did not choose to be in the hot seat,” Imad Hamad said in a telephone interview. “But the tragedy of Sept. 11 put us in the hot seat and imposed a new reality. Also, we have the background of anti-immigrant sentiment, in Arizona, and efforts by some to pass a similar law in Michigan.

So this victory is a reaffirmation that America is America, the land of the brave and the land of opportunity. Rima now she can be a role model for all our young people.”

Some noted that Fakih had stumbled when, in a question about birth control, she called it a “controlled substance.” And she nearly stumbled, quite literally, on her gown because of its long train. But she stayed upright.

As for Morgan Elizabeth Woolard of Oklahoma, she was asked a question—by actor Oscar Nunez of NBC’s “The Office”—about Arizona’s new immigration law. She said she supported the law, which requires police enforcing another law to verify a person’s immigration status if there’s “reasonable suspicion” that the person is in the country illegally.

“I’m a huge believer in states’ rights. I think that’s what’s so wonderful about America,” Woolard said. “So I think it’s perfectly fine for Arizona to create that law.”

Conservative bloggers like Michelle Malkin suggested the question was a trap. The pageant’s judges, who included skater Johnny Weir and NBA star Carmelo Anthony, were unavailable for comment Monday, as was Trump, whose office said he was too busy to speak about the pageant.

Fakih was born in Srifa, a village in southern Lebanon that was heavily bombed during the 2006 Israel-Hezbollah war. She moved to the United States with her family in 1993 and attended a Catholic school in New York. Her family moved to Michigan in 2003. Her sister, Rana, who moved back to Lebanon a few months ago for a new job, said she had spent the night exchanging messages with her father, Hussein, and another sister, Ruba, who were attending the competition.

“It was a beautiful surprise,” she said from Srifa. “It was not easy for Rima to reach this title. We’re very proud as Lebanese Americans and as Lebanese that Rima reached this point despite all the pressures and stereotyping about Arabs and Lebanese. She made it. She fought and reached her goal.”

Miss Michigan Rima Fakih, left, reacts as she is crowned Miss USA 2010 by Kristen Dalton, Miss USA 2009, Sunday, May 16, 2010 in Las Vegas.

Charlie Sheen sticking with ‘Two and a Half Men’

LOS ANGELES (AP)—CBS and fans of “Two and a Half Men” don’t have to fret about subtracting Charlie Sheen from TV’s top-rated sitcom.

Sheen has agreed to a new contract that will keep him on the show for two more seasons, spokesman Stan Rosenfield said Monday evening after the deal was reached.

“To put a fitting end on the 2 1/2 months of whirlwind speculation, I’m looking forward to returning to my CBS home on Monday nights,” Sheen, 44, said in a statement, adding his thanks to CBS Corp. Chief Executive Leslie Moonves for his support.

Uncertainty had clouded Sheen’s future with the series after he told friends that he wanted to leave after seven years because he’d tired of its production demands and wanted to focus on movies. He’s in the upcoming film “Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps,” a sequel to the 1987 “Wall Street” in which he starred.

Sheen

Subsequent reports said that he was holding out for a payday of up to $2 million per sitcom episode. CBS and Sheen had declined comment on the reports, and Sheen’s statement did not provide details of the new agreement.

A call to CBS for comment was not immediately returned Monday.

“Two and a Half Men,” which also stars Jon Cryer, is a key part of CBS’ Monday night lineup. Last year, the network gave the show a 3-year renewal, through the 2011-12 season, although Sheen’s contract was up at the end of the current season.

Meanwhile, the actor’s personal life remains unsettled. He has pleaded not guilty to charges stemming from a Christmas Day incident in Aspen, Colo., of alleged domestic violence involving his wife, Brooke Mueller Sheen. Sheen faces a July 21 jury trial in Colorado.

He entered a rehab facility for undisclosed treatment in February.

Ex-TV chef pleads not guilty in murder-hire plot

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Former “Calorie Commando” TV chef Juan-Carlos Cruz pleaded not guilty Monday to charges involving an alleged plot to hire two homeless men to kill his wife.

Unshaven and in handcuffs, Cruz, 48, entered the pleas to charges of attempted murder and solicitation of murder during his arraignment in Superior Court.

The former Food Network host could face life in prison if convicted. His lawyer, Shawn Chapman Holley, did not immediately respond to an e-mail from The Associated Press seeking comment.

Cruz was arrested Thursday, a week after a homeless man told the Santa Monica Police Department’s homeless liaison officers about the alleged solicitation and an investigation was launched.

The liaison officers help obtain social services for transients and try to get them off the streets, said Setareh Yavari, the city’s human services coordinator.

“A lot of people in the homeless community know them and trust them because they have a relationship with them,” Yavari said. “It doesn’t surprise me that they would go to (police) with something like this. There’s a sense that they’re taken seriously.”

Cruz is married to attorney Jennifer Campbell. Her lawyer, Blair Berk, had no comment.

Cruz was formerly a pastry chef for Los Angeles’ exclusive Hotel Bel-Air where he fashioned desserts for many rich and famous clients. As a result of his job, his weight ballooned to 280 pounds, according to his biography in the “Juan-Carlos Cruz Calorie Countdown Cookbook.”

He went on Discovery Health Network’s “Body Challenge” show and shed 100 pounds. He then landed his own show on Food Network, which focused on converting fattening recipes to low-calorie versions that tasted the same. The program ended in 2006.

Bristol Palin to hit speakers' circuit

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—Bristol Palin is hitting the speakers' circuit and will command between $15,000 and $30,000 for each appearance, Palin family attorney Thomas Van Flein said Monday.

Van Flein confirmed a report by celebrity news website RadarOnline that the daughter of former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin has signed with Single Source Speakers. He added her exact fees will depend on factors such as which group she's addressing and what she must do to prepare.

Bristol Palin, 19, is listed on the speaking group's website as available for conferences, fundraisers, special events and holidays, as well as women's, youth, abstinence and "pro-life" programs.

Her fee is denoted by four question marks, meaning "Call to discuss!" The same designation is given to New Orleans Saints quarterback Drew Brees.

A message left late Monday for Ron Miller, with Single Source Speakers, was not immediately returned.

Bristol Palin was thrust into the spotlight as a pregnant teen during her mother's unsuccessful campaign for vice president in 2008. She had son Tripp that year and has since spoken about abstinence and the challenges of life as a young single mother.

Van Flein said Bristol Palin will be selective in the speeches she gives.

He said he believes she's interested in expanding her message beyond teen pregnancy to include her experiences on the campaign trail and in the media spotlight; her parenting approach; and her outlook on life.

Bristol Palin lives in Anchorage and works in a physician's office, Van Flein said.

Demi Moore meets with NYC publishers about memoir

NEW YORK (AP)—Demi Moore wants to tell her story.

Moore's agent, Luke Janklow, confirmed Monday that the actress is working on a memoir and is meeting with publishers in New York. He declined to comment further.

The 47-year-old Moore is known for her work in the films "Ghost" and "A Few Good Men." In 1991, she posed naked and pregnant on the cover of Vanity Fair magazine.

Moore has three daughters with former husband Bruce Willis. She married Ashton Kutcher in 2005.

It's alumni week on 'Dancing with the Stars'

NEW YORK (AP)—Former "Dancing with the Stars" contestants Melissa Rycroft and Joey Fatone will return to the dance floor this week by performing the tango—together.

It's the first time the show has ever paired up two celebrities. Pro Mark Ballas will choreograph the number.

Fatone and Rycroft were picked by fans to perform in a contest called Design a Dance. Viewers also chose the dance style, song and costume design.

The two will dance to "Rock and Roll All Nite" by Kiss.

Fatone, a member of boy band

'N Sync, and Rycroft, Jason Mesnick's jilted fiancée on "The Bachelor," both did well in their respective turns on the show. Fatone was runner-up in season four, while Rycroft placed third in season eight. Still, they believe they'll need all the help they can get to pull off the tango.

"We'll probably have an hour attention span before we both just lose focus," jokes Rycroft.

One challenge for the couple is limited time to rehearse. Fatone lives in Orlando and Rycroft lives in Dallas, so the two said they would only have a week or so to practice.

Morricone, Bjork share Sweden's Polar Music Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Italian composer Ennio Morricone and Icelandic singer Bjork have won the 2010 Polar Music Prize, the prize committee said Monday.

They will be invited to accept the award, which includes 1 million kronor ($130,000) each in prize money, at a ceremony in Stockholm later this year.

The Polar Music Prize is Sweden's biggest music award and is typically shared by a pop artist and a classical musician. It was founded by Stig Anderson, manager of Swedish pop group ABBA, in 1989.

Prize committee Chairman Alfons Karabuda said 44-year-old Bjork personifies the border-breaking attributes sought by the committee, "bravely and without compromises."

Bjork sang in various Icelandic bands in the 1980's and rose to international fame with her solo album "Debut" in 1993. She has since released five more solo albums as well as film soundtracks and compilations. She also won the Cannes Film Festival's 2000 award for best actress for her role in Lars von Trier's "Dancer in the Dark."

"With her deeply personal music and lyrics, her precise arrangements and her unique voice, Bjork has already made an indelible mark on pop music and modern culture at large, despite her relative youth," the prize committee said in its citation.

SHOWBIZ TIDBITS

'Buffy' actress Emma Caulfield files for divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Former "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" actress Emma Caulfield has filed for divorce from her husband of more than three years. The 37-year-old Caulfield cites irreconcilable differences for the split from Cornelius Grobbelaar in documents filed last Thursday in Los Angeles Superior Court. Court documents show the pair separated May 7. They wed on Aug. 23, 2006. Caulfield played the vengeance demon Anya on the cult supernatural TV series, which ran from 1997 to 2003. Her attorney, Pedram Mansouri, would not comment when reached by phone. Attempts to contact Grobbelaar were unsuccessful.

William Shatner to star as dad in new CBS comedy

NEW YORK (AP)—William Shatner will star in his first sitcom on CBS next season. CBS has given the green light to a show on which the son of Shatner's character has more than a million followers to a Twitter account where he writes down his father's musings. A person familiar with the development process who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity because the person wasn't authorized to talk about CBS' schedule says the Shatner series is among six new ones the network will add next season. The shows include a spinoff to the FBI profilers drama "Criminal Minds" and a remake of the 1970s police series "Hawaii Five-0." CBS also is ordering a comedy about a couple who meet in a support group for overeaters, a cop drama with Tom Selleck and a Las Vegas-based legal series.

Travolta's 2 dogs killed in Maine airport accident

BANGOR, Maine (AP)—A service vehicle at Maine's Bangor International Airport has struck and killed two dogs owned by John Travolta. The city says the accident happened after an airplane carrying members of Travolta's family landed early last Thursday and the dogs were being walked. The city issued the statement after the Bangor Daily News newspaper confirmed the accident through an e-mail from the city manager to the City Council. A Travolta spokesman hasn't returned a telephone message left Monday seeking comment. The "Saturday Night Fever" and "Pulp Fiction" actor is an accomplished pilot who often flies to Bangor while en route to his home on Islesboro, off the Maine coast. It's unclear whether he was in the cockpit the night his dogs died.

Affair with stripper exposed by paper trail from jewelry

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband had an affair with a stripper. I found out about it because he bought her some jewelry and was stupid enough to have the bill sent to our home.

We have been married more than 20 years and I love him, but this haunts me every day. I am heartbroken, but I'm trying to make our marriage work. He never admitted to any of it and says nothing happened between them.

I don't know whether to keep on trying or leave him and hope to get on with my life. What's your advice?

WOUNDED HEART IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR WOUNDED HEART: You have my sympathy, but one person can't save a marriage alone. It takes effort on the part of both husband and wife, plus honest communication and often professional counseling to heal a relationship when there has been infidelity. Your husband may say "nothing" happened with the stripper, but the only man I can think of who bought jewelry for a woman he wasn't related to or romantically involved with was Michael Jackson when he gave some to Elizabeth Taylor.

Even though you love your husband, it's time to start taking care of yourself. And the place to start is by insisting on professional counseling. If he won't go, go without him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 24-year-old developmentally disabled son who lives with us. Three months ago, he met a nice girl at the mental health program he attends. They hold hands, go to the movies and occasionally smooch.

Recently, "Jasper" had a mark on his neck. We were over at a friend's house for dinner when my best friend noticed the mark. She then proceeded to tell me I should consider getting Jasper "fixed." At first, I wasn't sure I'd heard her correctly, so I asked her to repeat it. I am shocked that she thinks I should have my son sterilized.

Jasper is diagnosed with ADD and Asperger's syndrome. According to his mental health counselor, he could someday be married, have children and lead a productive, independent life. It just may take him longer to get to that point in comparison with his peers.

How should I respond to my friend about her suggestion? When she made it, I didn't know what to say.

SPEECHLESS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR SPEECHLESS: If you still want to maintain the friendship with the woman, tell her what your son's mental health counselor said about his prospects for the future. But first, if you haven't already, make sure Jasper clearly understands everything he needs to know to protect himself and his nice girlfriend from premature parenthood.

■ ■ ■

DEAR ABBY: Please answer a question for me. Why do we fall in love with people who we absolutely, positively cannot have?

HEARTBROKEN IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You have asked a question for which there is more than one answer. Some people do it because they don't recognize the warning signs quickly enough to back off before becoming enmeshed. Others can't resist a challenge. And still others do it because—believe it or not—it's less threatening than falling in love with someone we absolutely, positively CAN have.

Kobe gets 40, Lakers rout Suns in opener

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Kobe Bryant dribbled toward the Lakers' bench, luring Channing Frye and Jason Richardson along with him. Bryant leaned back and launched a feather-soft jumper over Phoenix's double team, neatly beating the first-quarter buzzer.

That's about when the Suns should have noted the bright yellow brace on Bryant's right knee is the color of a caution sign.

Even with a balky knee and a litany of additional woes, Bryant still is among the most dangerous postseason scorers in NBA history—and he had no problem giving Los Angeles an early leg up in the Western Conference finals.

Bryant scored 40 points, Lamar Odom added 19 points and 19 rebounds, and the Lakers opened the series with ruthless offensive efficiency in a 128-107 victory on Monday night.

"Just being aggressive, playing my game," Bryant said. "Got shots, took them. Got lanes to the basket, took them."

Pau Gasol had 21 points for the top-seeded Lakers, who won their seventh straight playoff game and snapped the Suns' six-game streak with a phenomenal second half, highlighted by Bryant's 21-point third quarter. He barely stepped on the Lakers' practice court during the past week to rest his ailing knee, ankle, finger and back—all minor impediments to a major talent.

"I practice so much during the season," Bryant said. "In the offseason, I work a lot. To take a week off, I'm not going to lose all the work I put in prior to that."

The defending NBA champions beat the third-seeded Suns at their own uptempo game when necessary, fluidly running the court to set up baskets for Bryant in his sixth straight 30-point game. Bryant then rested for most of the fourth quarter in the 11th 40-point game of his playoff career.

"They played great, one of the best games I've seen them play in the playoffs this season," Suns coach Alvin Gentry said. "Kobe kind of controlled the whole game. I thought we could have withstood the game that he had ... but when he's making his jumper like that, there's not a whole lot you can do about it."

Game 2 is Wednesday night at Staples Center.

Amare Stoudemire scored 23 points and Steve Nash had 13 points and 13 assists for the Suns, who hadn't lost since April 24. Robin Lopez started at center and scored 14 points in his playoff debut,

Los Angeles Lakers guard Kobe Bryant dunks during the second half of Game 1 of the NBA basketball Western Conference finals against the Phoenix Suns, Monday, May 17, 2010, in Los Angeles. AP but Phoenix couldn't keep up with the champs' height and 58-percent shooting in the Suns' first conference finals appearance since 2006.

The Suns also ran into the same height problems faced by Utah and Oklahoma City earlier in the Lakers' playoff run. Los Angeles committed just nine turnovers in Game 1—its third straight single-digit turnover game—while outrebounding the smaller Suns 42-34.

"They're probably going to continue to be taller than us as the series goes on, so we've got to ... make everything as tough as possible," said Nash, whose injured eye didn't bother him. "We played hard, but we didn't make enough shots, and we had a few too many breakdowns."

Both teams swept their second-round series to earn their third postseason date in five years, but the Lakers didn't allow a week off to affect their remarkable execution. They scored easily and often, even with center Andrew Bynum managing just four points while playing shakily on his own sore knee.

After a 62-point first half for the Lakers, Bryant alternated jumpers and strong drives while Los Angeles pulled away, making a 13-2 run in the third quarter. His 13-for-23 shooting performance included three 3-pointers and 11 free throws with just one miss.

"Kobe carried a lot of the offense tonight, no doubt," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "I will say he was going to shoulder the game. He was going to take it on. He's been very optimistic through the whole week. He felt like he had the amount of rest and shooting he had to have. He was attentive and involved (in practice)."

The Suns sent Bryant, Odom and the Lakers home for the summer in 2006 and 2007, and Los Angeles' veterans acknowledged a measure of revenge in their minds—as long as they're healthy enough to do it.

Jackson revealed before the game that Bryant's right knee was drained "a while ago," moving it to the top of the injury list for last season's NBA finals MVP. But Bryant showed no ill effects, and he even bounced back up after hitting his head on Richardson's knee during a drive in the first quarter.

"He's the best scorer in the league," said Odom, who set a career playoff high for rebounds in his most assertive game of the current postseason. "Drives, fadeaways with his back to the basket, inside-outside, with his left hand. Time off is exactly what he needed."

With Prokhorov in front row, Nets seek lottery win

NEW YORK (AP)—With their new owner sitting front row, the New Jersey Nets will have the best chance to win the NBA draft lottery.

They could sure use the help.

Mikhail Prokhorov will represent the Nets on stage Tuesday night in Secaucus, N.J., for the lottery, which his team has a 25 percent chance of winning after finishing with a league-worst 12-70 record.

Kentucky freshman point guard John Wall is considered the top prize in this year's class, with player of the year Evan Turner of Ohio State also expected to go high next month.

"From my perspective, I think that we are in a very good position. We're going to get a really good player, so I'm excited about that," Nets president Rod Thorn said. "You always want to get as high as you can, because the higher you get, the more leverage it gives you. We're hoping for the best, but we do know that wherever we end up, we'll get a good player."

The Nets can finish no worse than fourth. However, the lottery hasn't been kind to the team that needs the most assistance lately.

Not since 2004, when the Orlando Magic selected Dwight Howard, has the team with the worst record won the lottery. Last year, the Sacramento Kings tumbled to fourth—though they did end up with eventual Rookie of the Year Tyreke Evans.

Thorn believes the lottery system works and has always been supportive of it, going back to when he worked in the league office, though he joked that, "Hopefully I won't be upset tomorrow night."

The Minnesota Timberwolves (19.9 percent) and Sacramento (15.6 percent) are the other teams with high lottery probabilities. Golden State (10.4 percent) and Washington (10.3) round out the top five.

The 14 teams that missed the playoffs are in the lottery. The lottery determines the top three picks, with the next 11 spots being determined in inverse order of a team's record.

The Timberwolves are in the lottery for the 13th time and have never improved their position, staying in the spot they were supposed to pick six times and falling six other times. Maybe that's why Wolves president of basketball operations David Kahn was trying to downplay the importance of the drawing.

"There's a tendency with tomorrow night to make everybody feel the stakes are much higher than they actually are. I don't think the stakes are as high as people would like others to believe," he said. "Sure, would we like to be 1, 2, 3 even? Of course. But I just don't see the world becoming a very bad place for Timberwolves fans if, God forbid, we're at 4 or 5 tomorrow night."

Prokhorov, a billionaire from Russia, was approved as Nets owner by the NBA's board of governors last week. The team will formally introduce him at a news conference in New York on Wednesday.

By then, the Nets could have plenty to celebrate if a lottery pattern holds form. New Jersey won in 1990 and 2000, and now hopes the balls bounce their way in 2010.

"I think we're going to get a lot of positive buzz no matter what," Thorn said. "The cache that he brings with him, we're going to get a lot of positive feedback, particularly in this area. I think it's going to be really good for our fans and our team."

The Nets drafted Derrick Coleman with their first win and with the second grabbed Kenyon Martin, who became a starter on a team that made consecutive NBA finals appearances.

Landing the top pick would be a huge step in what the Nets hope can be a quick turnaround. It would make them more attractive as they look to fill their vacant coaching position, and a more enticing option for one of the top free agents available this summer. New Jersey is among the teams that can afford a maximum salary player.

Prokhorov's wallet and his desire to win will help with that. For now, all the Nets want from him is luck.

"If we win, we have control of the draft so to speak," Thorn said.

Howard frustrated by Celtics in Game 1 loss

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Dwight Howard knew what the Boston Celtics had planned. Whenever he got the ball in the post, someone was going to hit him, bump him, push him, do whatever it took to keep him from getting into rhythm.

It wasn't a new approach.

The Celtics simply do it better than just about everyone else.

Howard made only 3 of his 10 shots from the floor Sunday, continuing what's been a yearlong offensive struggle against the Celtics, and his Orlando Magic lost Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals to Boston 92-88.

"I played like a robot," Howard said.

He doesn't have long for reprogramming. Game 2 is Tuesday night.

Sure, most of Howard's field-goal attempts come either through dunks, putbacks or layups, so it's not hard to see why he perennially ranks among the NBA's best in terms of shooting percentage.

But this is telling: Howard shot less than 50 percent this season against only three teams, those being Miami, Denver and—sure enough—Boston, which has a deep number of long-armed, big-bodied defenders to get in his way. The Celtics aren't going to change their thinking, and now, it's on Howard to find a way to counter.

"We have to make plays to make it easier for him," Magic guard Vince Carter said. "Once we get down and we are hitting shots and we're making plays, I think they have to kind of worry about what we're doing, and I think it opens things up for him. Some nights where he gets rolling, it opens things up for us. So we have to kind of return the favor."

Morneau fires Twins over Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP)—Justin Morneau homered twice as the Minnesota Twins beat the Toronto Blue Jays 8-3 on Monday, boosting their lead in the American League Central division.

Morneau went 3 for 4 with a walk and four RBIs. He hit a solo homer in the sixth inning and added a two-run drive in the eighth, his first multihomer game this season and the 13th of his career. Morneau has hit safely in 10 straight games.

Delmon Young also went deep for the Twins.

Toronto's Jose Bautista homered for the fourth time in three games, his team-leading 11th, but the Blue Jays' four-game winning streak ended.

Minnesota starter Kevin Slowey (5-3) earned his first win in five career starts against the Blue Jays.

Toronto starter Dana Eveland (3-3) took the loss.

Yankees 11, Red Sox 9

In New York, the hosts got two homers in the ninth inning to secure a thrilling win over Boston.

The Yankees were trailing by two runs in the ninth, but with one out and a runner on third, Rodriguez hit his first pitch over the fence in left-center to tie it 9-9. Boston pitcher Jonathan Papelbon (1-3) got Robinson Cano to fly out for the second out, but hit Francisco Cervelli with a pitch before Marcus Thames drove his next delivery over the wall in left.

Thames was mobbed at home plate after New York's first game-ending hit of the season.

New York's Javier Vazquez (2-4) got the win in an unfamiliar reliever role, striking out Kevin Youkilis with runners on the corners for the final out of the ninth.

Rays 4, Indians 3, 11 innings

In St. Petersburg, Jason Bartlett laid down a bunt to drive in the winning run in the 11th inning, giving Tampa Bay victory over Cleveland.

John Jaso hit a one-out single against Jamey Wright (1-2) and went to third on Gabe Kapler's single to right. Bartlett then laid down a bunt on the first base side of the mound that Wright fielded and was forced to make a desperation toss toward the plate that went over the catcher's head.

Andy Sonnanstine (1-0), the sixth Tampa Bay reliever, took the win by striking out two during a perfect 11th, helping the Rays improve to a major league-best 27-11 this season.

Rangers 4, Angels 3

In Arlington, Derek Holland pitched into the sixth inning to set up Texas' tight win over Los Angeles.

Holland (2-0) allowed five hits in 5 1-3 innings in his second start since being recalled from the minors.

Nelson Cruz drove in two runs for the Rangers, while Neftali Feliz got three outs for his ninth save in 11 chances.

Mike Napoli and Torii Hunter homered for the Angels, whose three-game winning streak ended.

Angels starter Scott Kazmir (2-4) gave up nine hits in seven innings, his longest outing of the season.

Athletics 8, Mariners 4

In Oakland, Kevin Kouzmanoff and

Minnesota Twins' Justin Morneau, right, celebrates with third base coach Scott Ullger after hitting a home run during the second inning of a baseball game against the New York Yankees, Sunday, May 16, 2010, at Yankee Stadium in New York.

Adam Rosales each hit two-run homers to lift Oakland over Seattle.

Rajai Davis drove in two runs, and Daric Barton and Kurt Suzuki also had RBIs for the A's, who ended a five-game losing skid.

Gio Gonzalez (4-3) matched his season high with seven innings pitched, giving up four hits.

Seattle's Matt Tuiasosopo hit a home run, and Jose Lopez had two hits and drove in three runs as the Mariners lost their third straight.

Starter Ryan Rowland-Smith (0-4) gave up a career-worst seven runs in 4 1-3 innings, his shortest start.

Royals 4, Orioles 3

In Baltimore, Kyle Davies allowed only two runs in six innings, steering Kansas City past Baltimore.

Davies (3-2) yielded two singles in each of his first three innings, then retired nine of the final 11 batters he faced.

Joakim Soria worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth for his 10th save.

A crowd of 9,299—second-smallest in the 19-year history of Camden Yards—turned out on a wet, chilly night to watch the teams with the two worst records in the AL.

Baltimore's Brad Bergesen (3-3) suffered the loss.

Padres 3, Giants 1

In San Diego, the San Diego Padres stayed atop the National League West by beating the San Francisco Giants—their seventh straight win against their divisional rival.

Adrian Gonzalez homered for the Padres, who staged a form reversal, as they were coming off three straight losses while the Giants entered with three consecutive wins.

San Diego starter Clayton Richard beat Giants starter Matt Cain (2-2) for the second time in a span of six games by holding San Francisco to one run in seven innings.

Cardinals 6, Nationals 2

In St. Louis, Albert Pujols had three hits and a walk and helped fuel a four-run first inning that was enough for St. Louis to defeat Washington.

The big first inning against Nationals starter Craig Stammen (1-2) came with Pujols batted fourth in the order for the first time since 2003.

Kyle Lohse (1-3) became the final member of the St. Louis rotation to win this season.

Phillies 12, Pirates 2

In Philadelphia, Kyle Kendrick pitched eight impressive innings to guide Philadelphia to a rout of Pittsburgh.

Pitching in a steady rain, Kendrick (2-1) allowed two runs, striking out four.

Ryan Howard hit a grand slam and had six RBIs, while Jayson Werth had a three-run homer for the NL East-leading Phillies, who have won four straight.

Philadelphia got one of its injured stars back when Jimmy Rollins returned to the lineup after missing 29 games with a calf injury. The three-time All-Star shortstop and 2007 NL MVP had two hits and an RBI.

Pirates starter Charlie Morton (1-7) gave up six runs in four innings.

Mets 3, Braves 2

In Atlanta, Mike Pelfrey pitched 7 2-3 strong innings to help New York edge Atlanta and end a five-game losing streak.

Pelfrey (5-1) became the first Mets starting pitcher to win a game this month.

Rod Barajas gave the Mets a 2-0 lead with a two-run double off Braves starter Derek Lowe (5-4) in the second.

Pedro Feliciano struck out Brian McCann with the bases loaded in the eighth to protect a one-run lead. Francisco Rodriguez pitched the ninth for his sixth save, striking out Nate McLouth with a runner on second to end the game.

Reds 6, Brewers 3

In Cincinnati, Jonny Gomes' three-run homer completed a five-run rally in the seventh inning, as Cincinnati retained the Central lead for another day by beating Milwaukee.

Gomes' homer off Todd Coffey (1-1) sent the Reds to their eighth victory in nine games. They haven't led the Central this deep into a season since 2006.

Reds starter Johnny Cueto (3-1) fanned seven, giving up Corey Hart's solo homer. Hart also homered in the ninth.

The slumping Brewers lost their season-worst seventh straight.

Diamondbacks 5, Marlins 1

In Miami, Edwin Jackson struck out a career-high 12 in eight shutout innings to lead Arizona over Florida.

Jackson (2-5), who was on the All-Star team last season, came in with a 1-5 record and 7.43 ERA. In addition to that, he was 0-3 with an ERA over 11 in four career appearances against the Marlins.

Stephen Drew, John Hester, and Conor Jackson each drove in a run for the Diamondbacks.

Florida starter Chris Volstad (3-4) took the loss.

Manuel Gonzalez became the first Venezuelan umpire in major league baseball history, working at third base.

Cubs 4, Rockies 2, 11 innings

In Chicago, Aramis Ramirez hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning, his first home run in more than a month, lifting Chicago over Colorado.

Starlin Castro opened the 11th with his third hit of the game, a single off Matt Belisle (1-1). After an out, Ramirez lined a pitch through a stiff wind into the left-field bleachers.

Ramirez, who also drove in Chicago's first run, has been in a season-long slump. Even after the two-hit game, he is batting only .175 after hitting .300 in his first seven seasons with the Cubs.

Sean Marshall (3-1), the fourth Cubs pitcher, worked two perfect innings, striking out four to take the win.

Dodgers 6, Astros 2

In Los Angeles, John Ely pitched his third straight game of six or more innings without issuing a walk, directing Los Angeles to victory over Houston and to its eighth straight win.

Ely (2-1) allowed two runs over seven innings and struck out eight. The rookie has faced 84 consecutive batters without issuing a walk.

Casey Blake and Blake Dewitt each drove in two runs for the Dodgers.

Houston starter Wandy Rodriguez (2-5) allowed seven hits in 6 2-3 innings. His only strikeout came against his first batter.

Injury concerns remain as US team opens camp

PRINCETON, N.J.

(AP)—Before wrapping themselves in the red, white and blue, the U.S. soccer players surrounded themselves with orange and black.

Players began training for the World Cup on Monday at Princeton University's Roberts Stadium, a $13.4 million soccer facility opened two years ago by the alma mater of U.S. coach Bob Bradley, who also coached the Tigers from 1984-95.

Even on the first day of workouts, there were injuries that caused goalkeeper Tim Howard (quadriceps strain), defender Jay DeMerit (abdominal strain), forward Eddie Johnson (hamstring strain) and defender Chad Marshall (slight hamstring strain) to be in the trainer's room instead of sprinting across the lush, green grass, where pennants making Ivy League titles and NCAA tournament appearances flapped. Defender Carlos Bocanegra (abdominal strain) did ball work on his own.

"We've had long seasons, all of us, and guys have some knocks," said Howard, the starter for Everton in England. "There's no reason to rush anyone into it right now. Everything is just precautionary."

Landon Donovan, Edson Buddle and Jose Torres weren't around at all, off getting physicals after reporting Sunday. Four players based in Europe were still due to arrive late Monday or Tuesday.

And there were still questions about one player who won't be coming, forward Charlie Davies.

Davies thought he recovered sufficiently from a near-fatal car crash last October to merit an invitation only to learn last Tuesday he had been omitted from the 30-man preliminary roster.

Bradley said he made the decision based on input from U.S. trainers and the staff of Davies' French club, Sochaux. Bradley even viewed a video of Davies in a recent training session in France.

He understood Davies' anger last week.

"There's a lot of emotion at that time," he said. "From right after the accident until now, you know, he put all his energy and emotion into his rehab, and he did it, you know, with an obvious timetable."

Bradley shared a conversation he had with Davies in February, saying he felt as if he were a father or an older brother. He had been aware of all the favorable accounts Davies had been giving of his rehabilitation during interviews and on his Twitter account.

"I told him that I felt that if he could keep his attitude, his mentality, his work ethic, that that was going to be very important," he said. "But I also said if you can find a way to work and put everything into it and maybe not have so much to say, I think it would work for you. Because you don't want to put yourself in a position that you're making all this progress and yet somehow it seems like a failure because the timing just doesn't coincide with the World Cup. What's most important is that you can still get yourself back to the level that you were playing before the accident."

FIELDERS

Manibusan thanked his fellow coaches, James Sablan and Pat Tenorio for their time, dedication, and commitment to the new team; adding that his players really enjoyed playing as a group and the chemistry that they have together posed a significant factor to their success.

The Fielders wasted no time in the top of the first and took an early two-run lead.

Shane Mendiola connected with a two-RBI single that brought in Juan Maratita and John Reyes who both drew leadoff walks.

Then after fending of the Brewers in the bottom half, the Fielders attacked again with three more runs in the top of the second.

Ryan Lisua hit a one-out single and scored off a passed ball. John Reyes knocked in Eli Aughenbaugh who reached earlier with a single.

Then Ton Tenorio brought home Reyes with a base hit before getting hosed at second trying to stretch a double.

The score remained 5-0, Fielders, after a scoreless third, but in the top of the fourth, Ton Tenorio brought in two runners with a sacrifice fly ball.

Aughenbaugh and Maratita both came to the plate after an errant throw from the outfield.

In the bottom half, the Brewers offense finally showed up and trimmed the margin to 7-5.

Manny Sablan scored off an error after drawing a walk.

After Sablan scored, the Brewers loaded the bases and Vince Cepeda drew a walk that brought in Jess Mesa who reached earlier with a single.

After Mesa scored, the Fielders called Shane Mendiola to the mound in relief for starter Ionis Rasa.

Mendiola plunked his first batter, Ed Kapileo, which gave Reno Celis, who reached with a walk, a free pass to the plate for the Brewers' third run of the inning.

Then Dave Kapileo scored off a passed ball and Ron Benavente singled home Cepeda before the Fielders retained their composure.

The Brewers came out on defense in the top of the fourth and retired the first two batters, but just when the game looked like it was going to get close, the Fielders rallied back with three more runs.

Lisua singled in Justin Reyes and then Ton Tenorio busted a two-run homer before the Brewers could stop the bleeding.

The Brewers tried to fight back in the bottom half, but were already showing signs of fatigue.

Dave Kapileo knocked in Manny Sablan who led off with a single and Jess Mesa singled and scored off an error.

Then with the score at 10-7, Fielders in the top of the sixth, the Fielders did not let up and turned it up another notch.

John Reyes led off with a walk, stole second, went to third off an error, and scored off a wild pitch.

After the walk, the Brewers called Ed Santos to the mound to relieve their starter, Jason Hayes.

Mendiola drew a one out walk and was brought in off a Jason Reyes triple.

Then Vince Sablan singled home Jason Reyes.

Justin Reyes reached with a single and with two outs, Ton Tenorio stepped up to the plate and jacked a three-run homerun; his second of the night in back to back innings.

After the homer, the Brewers called Ben Duenas to the mound in relief for Santos to get the last out.

Now at 16-7, Fielders, it was all Fielders from here on out. The Brewers managed to score a run in the seventh and eighth innings, but the Fielders added three more runs in the seventh and another in the eighth.

The Brewers threw everything they had at the Fielders, but the latter's hitting was simply on fire and they continued to run the bases aggressively even with the considerable lead.

Even though the Fielders worked very well as a unit to put up 20 runs, a couple of notables of the game included Ton Tenorio, who batted 3-for-5 with two homeruns, five RBIs, four runs, and one stolen base en route to winning the championship MVP. John Reyes, meanwhile, batted 3-for-3 with one RBI, five runs, three walks, and two stolen bases.

Island Rebels claimed the pennant in Chamolinian Softball Association's 2009 Budweiser Slow-pitch Softball League, following a thrilling 22-21 win over Chura on Monday at the Capital Hill Ballfield.

Island Rebels finished the regular season with an 18-2 record, tying Natibu, but the former won the tie-break due to its 13-3 win over the latter last Friday.

A two-run homer each from Roy Celis and Mitch Aaron at the bottom of the seventh inning lifted Island Rebels to a close win over Chura.

Chura led, 21-17, when Celis hit a round-tripper and brought Ray Cepeda home. Then Toi Celis singled in B.J. Babauta to move Island Rebels within one, 20-21, before Aaron blasted a homer and drove the former home for the game-winning run.
